D., 1910, at the hour of 2.30 o'clock in the afternoon, to commemorate the death of our late lamented Sovereign Edward VII, by the Grace of God King of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions Beyond the Seas, Emporer of India.

A cordial invitation to attend is extended to all loyal subjects of his Late Majesty.

AMONG THE CHURCHES

The draping of the Western Church under the direction of Mr. Maude (of Madill Bros.) is extremely effective and lavish being in royal purple and black with Union Jacks and shields "lest we forget" forming a most conspicuous centre whilst "India" Cape Colony" Australia" "Canada" convey to the mind an impression of the vastness of Britain's Empire and renown. We understand that at intervals on Saturday next organ selections will be played during the day.

The Rev. Vernon H. Emory, of Picton, will be the preacher of the day in the Western Church on Sunday next.

In the Western Church on Sunday a most attractive service was held in honor of Motherhood. Mother's Day is certainly one of the institutions of the Western Church. In the evening the pastor made reference to the nation's bereavement and announced for a commemorative service on the day of the funeral which will be held on the 20th, inst.

At a most harmonious and important meeting of the joint Boards of the Western Church held on Tuesday evening last an increase in the sum of $100 was added to the Pastor's salary which was carried unanimously.

NEWS NOTES.

The funeral of King Edward will probably be held on May 20th at Windsor.

The marine underwriters have offered a reward for information as to the whereabouts of the wrecked ferry Bessemer No. 2.

The Aylesworth Club met at King City and passed a resolution approving Mr. Aylesworth's course in Parliament and deprecating the attacks made upon him.

Irving Hanchett, the fifteen-year-old Connecticut boy convicted of the brutal murder of Cleve Tedder, a thirteen-year-old girl, on the evening of February 12th, last, was hanged on Friday.

The Governor-General, the Premier, and the Ministers at present in Ottawa took the oath to the new King and orders were issued to the militia regarding the forms of mourning to be observed.

Ten persons were killed by an explosion of virite in the factory of the General Explosives Company at Hull. The shock broke a lot of glass in Ottawa, and the people of both cities were greatly alarmed.

Having been driven insane by the fear that the world would be destroyed by Halley's comet, Fred Bowers, a farmer of Massillon, is being held at the police station pending the arrival of an order committing him to the state asylum. The immediate cause of Bowers' incarceration is his refusal to pay for quantities of merchandise which he purchased. He declared that it was useless to pay for them, for in fifteen days the world would be consumed by fire. Bowers declares that he has a mission from God to warn men that the end of the world is approaching.

Left for You.

We still have a few hundred packages of the following: "free" to any desiring them, Liquid Veneer, Nature's Remedy Tablets, and Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets. We want you to get one before they are all gone. The Medical Hall—Napanee's Largest Drug Store—Fred L. Hooper.

Noble McGill, a resident of this part for the past ten years, but formerly of Western Ontario, passed away on the 5th of May, after suffering for the past six months of tuberculosis. Deceased was aged about thirty-five years and is survived by a wife and three children, also his father and mother, who were in attendance at his last illness and death. His funeral was conducted by the Masonic Order, of which deceased was a member.

Several cases of measles have been reported lately in this part.

There is a large amount of milk received at the cheese factory for so early in the season.

DENBIGH.

Most of the farmers are about done with their springs seeding and are fitting up their planting ground. The weather however was rather cool lately and we had a couple of very sharp night frosts last week which retarded vegetation somewhat, but did not do much actual damage.

Mr. Manly Jones, Secty. Treas. of the Lennox and Addington Mutual Fire Insurance Co., paid a visit to our little burg last week to appraise the loss of Mr. Chas. C. Stein, by the burning of his dwelling and part of its contents. A satisfactory settlement was arrived at.

Mr. Sinclair, of Perth, general agent for the Massey-Harris Manufacturing Co. for this District, was also several days in our village and vicinity looking after the business and interests of the company.

Mrs. Wm. Lane has been very ill with a serious attack of pneumonia, but is now improving under the treatment of Dr. J. Adams and the careful nursing of Mrs. G. Adam.

Mr. Herbert Fritsch who has for quite a while been suffering with sore eyes is also improving and will likely soon be able to resume work again.

STELLA.

The farmers are in high hopes of an abundant crop as the recent rains have made the grass grow rapidly. Grain is also looking well.

The death occurred in Kingston, May 2nd, of an old and much respected former resident of the Island, in the person of Peter Grattan, who was born on the island sixty years ago. In his younger days he took up the carpenter trade; then with his parents removed to Kansas. Some years later he returned to the island and followed his trade. He built many gasoline boats here, and superintended the building of two scows, Granger and Ariadne, which are now trading from bay ports. Owing to ill health, deceased with his wife removed to Kingston about three years ago.

Good prices were realized at S. Fleming's auction sale on Thursday, April 28th. Some of the cows brought over fifty dollars apiece.

A young child of H. McCormicks, passed away in the hospital in Kingston, after an operation, on Tuesday. The funeral was held here on Wednesday.

Mrs. Polley has returned home, accompanied by her niece, Miss Lindsay, after spending the winter with her daughter in Strathroy.

The producer says he does not get the extra eight cents; the wholesaler says he does not get it; the butcher says he does not get it. Will some one be kind enough to let us know who does get it? It's been lost somewhere in the shuffle.

TOWN COUNCIL.

A special session of the town council was held on Wednesday morning.

The meeting was called to consider the advisability of having a civic memorial service on May 20th, on the occasion of the funeral of our late Sovereign King Edward VII.

Those present were Mayor Simpson in the chair and Reeve Alexander and Councillors Meng, Waller, Hawley, Kimmerly, Osborne and Steacy.

A communication was read from Rev. W. H. Emsley extending an invitation to the members of the council to attend a memorial service in the Western Methodist Church on Friday morning, May 20th, at 10 a. m.

A similar communication to the above was also received from Rev. F. T. Dibb extending an invitation to the council to attend a memorial service in St. Mary Magdalene Church on May 20th, at 10 a. m.

As the members of the council could not accept both invitations it was decided not to officially attend either service.

On motion of Councillors Waller and Kimmerly it was decided that May 20th be proclaimed a public holiday, and that a civic memorial service be held in the opera house on that date, at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

On motion of Reeve Alexander and Councillor Meng it was decided to have the town hall suitably draped, and that the work be done under the supervision of the Town Property Committee.

Councillor Waller was empowered to make arrangements for securing the DEATH OF MR. E. J. B. PENSE.

Death came with great suddenness to Mr. Edward John Barker Pense, proprietor and publisher of The Kingston Daily British Whig, on Saturday afternoon. Mr. Pense performed his office duties and was apparently in his usual health. While working in his garden at his residence, at 2.45 o'clock, he was seized with apoplexy, and immediately after being helped into the house became unconscious. Drs. Garrett and Thirid were summoned and remained with him until the end came at 4.45 o'clock.

News of his death came as a great shock to the community, for Mr. Pense was regarded as Kingston's most energetic and foremost citizen. The late Mr. Pense was born in Kingston on June 3, 1848, and was educated at Kingston Academy. He became connected with the Whig under the late Dr. J. Barker, his grandfather, who established that newspaper in 1834, and he had been a leading factor in Canadian journalism for over forty years. He was for six years an Alderman, and in 1881 was Mayor of Kingston. He served as School Trustee, Hospital Governor, President of the Kingston Athletic Association, Governor of the School of Mining, President of the Board of Trade, and on the Boards of the Women's Medical College, the Humane Society, and the Reform Association. He held a prominent position in the Ontario Synod, and for years was a representative to the General Synod.

At the time of his death he conducted two church publications: The Monthly Ontario Churchman and The Weekly Church Life, both of which he edited. The Whig has been on both sides of the political fence, but when Mr. Pense assumed control of it in 1872, it turned Liberal. Ever since it has been Liberal, not narrow in adhesion to party, but true to Liberal traditions, defending the right and opposing the wrong.

Mr. Pense was a born journalist. When he was fourteen he entered his grandfather's printing office, and when he was eighteen he was a keen reporter. At twenty-three he became proprietor. When he changed The Whig from a Tory to a Liberal newspaper he faced a grave problem, for his old associations were broken. Today his paper is on every street, but in placing it in the position it now enjoys its owner lies dead at the early age of sixty-two, for he wore himself out with strenuous work.

The last article written by Mr. Pense appeared in Saturday's Whig, being a racy account of his remembrances of King Edward's visit to Kingston in 1890.

Eight Days.

From the standard of present development the airship of 1915 may be conceived as having a hull of rigid construction, 1,000 feet long and 80 feet beam, with accommodation for 125 to 150 passengers, and a crew of 40 men.

The new air liner will resemble a submarine, or rather a flying fish. All its parts will be compactly built into the hull. Its under body, 800 feet long, twelve feet wide and nine feet high, will extend between the elbows fore and aft where the hull begins to curve toward its pointed bow and stern. The underbody will hold seven passengers and eight operating sections, after the fashion of a compartment sleeping car. A continuous passageway will extend from end to end.

The prow glazed with artificial mica will furnish an aerial observatory. Its interior will be a series of grill galleries, connected by a steps. Here will be the bridge, the air-liner's nerve center, with signal radiation to all parts of the ship. A narrow gallery will reach the extreme nose, where a small exploring gun, swung on a universal joint, can be fired toward most points in space. On its several platforms will be the navigating deck, the helm, the wireless, the chart-room and both meteorological and astronomical observatories.

will be a hatchway to the main passage in the forward underbody of the ship, where there is a companionway which is the ship's portal. Aft of this will be the captain's cabin. To starboard will begin the main passage and staterooms, with all doors opening on the passage. Next to the captain's quarters, in sequence, will be officers' and engineers' staterooms; officers' wardroom and mess; the barber shop; the first motor compartment; the toilet room; passengers' staterooms; passengers' living-quarters, a central lounging, reading and dining saloon, the width of the ship.

The saloons, glazed with openings of artificial mica, can be transformed into open deck space, by sliding side ports. At the stern will be the steward's quarters, where all cooking will be by electricity. Meals will be served in each saloon, the pantry service being operated by escalator, passing through the hold, which will be attached to the airship's entire underbody. Table service will be delivered through a trap in the saloon floor. Telephone and electric annunciators will connect each section with the steward's quarters. As only 25 passengers will be accommodated in each section, but one steward will be required there.

Loftiest Permanently Inhabited
Places in the World.

The highest permanently inhabited place in Europe is the meteorological station on the summit of Sonnblick, at a height of 10,000 feet.

In America the highest permanently inhabited place is in the village of St. Vincent, in Bolivia, with an altitude of 4,850 meters. In Asia it is the monastery Hanle, in Tibet; height 4,160 meters. Leadville, Col., has an altitude of 10,185 feet.

The hospice of St. Bernard, in Switzerland, Europe's highest inhabited point aside from the station above mentioned, is but 8,200 feet. Quito, the capital of Ecuador, situated near the volcano Pichincha, is 8,934 feet above the sea level. The Oroya Railroad, in Peru, South America, climbs an altitude of 15,500 feet in order to cross the range of Andes Mountains.

A tunnel, the highest in the world, five miles long is now being pierced through the Andes Mountains from Arica, Chile, to La Paz, Bolivia, at a height of 12,000 feet above the sea level, 700 men being employed day and night on the work. The world's highest funicular railway when completed will reach the summit of Mount Blanc, 15,782 feet above the level of the sea.

Sir Martin Conway, speaking of the high Bolivian plateau, says that it reminds him in many respects of Tibet. At 12,500 feet above sea level the climate must always be severe. The natives' habit of wrapping up their heads in shawls or ponchos is easily accounted for. Pneumonia is the commonest diseases in the high parts of Bolivia.

Few people live to any great age there. Even in the town of La Paz, which lies in a hollow is well protected from most winds, old people are rare, and a man of 70 is pointed to as a phenomenon.

He says that it takes time to habituate oneself to living day in and day out far above one's usual altitude. Many persons can never become habituated to the altitude, and are more or less ill during the course of their stay. This is particularly the case with children and persons of advanced age.

"It may be said," says a writer in the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette, "that horses are more sensitive than men in differences in atmospheric pressure, and doubtless a man can climb many thousand feet higher than he can take a horse. I have not myself seen a horse or mule capable of carrying a man over easy ground at a higher altitude than about 16,500 feet, where they almost uniformly break down, though I have been told that in Sikkim horses carry travellers to an altitude of 18,000 feet.

From sea level upward, as the air becomes rarer and the supply of oxygen less, the strength of man diminishes. Though this diminution may not be perceived except as the result of minute and careful experiments, and the man himself may be unconscious of it, it is none the less true."

BIG GUNS OF COLOSSUS

TEN 12-INCH CAN FIRE AT ONE TARGET.

Nine Dreadnoughts Afloat With Four Cruisers of Invincible Class.

H. M. S. Colossus, the largest of the dreadnought type, and therefore the greatest battleship in the British navy, which was launched at Greenock recently, was built by the Scotts Shipbuilding and Engineering Company, and is the first ship of the dreadnought class to be built on the Clyde.

After the launch the Colossus was taken in tow by several tugs and brought into the firm's basin for engineering with turbine machinery of 25,000 horse-power to give a speed of 21 knots. The engines will be completed this year, and the trials will take place early in 1911.

The tonnage of the Colossus is 22,500 tons, or 4,600 greater than that of the original dreadnought. Her length is 545 feet, as compared with the 490 feet of the first dreadnought and with the 425 feet of the largest battleship of the pre-dreadnought period. This addition to the length is a consequence of the determination of the admiralty to ensure the maximum utility from all of the which will fire 850-pound projectiles at unprecedented velocity. All of these guns carried in the Colossus will fire on either broadside, so that, whether the enemy's line of ships be to port or starboard, every gun will be available. No gun will therefore be idle.

In addition to the ten 12-inch guns, which are mounted in pairs in barbettes, with revolving armored hoods protecting the ordnance machinery, there are a large number of 35-pounder guns disposed throughout the ship for repelling torpedo-boat attack. The guns and vital parts of the ship are protected by armor, the greatest thickness being 11 inches.

The total cost of the battleship when completed for commissioning will probably work out at about £1,700,000.

With the launch of the Colossus there are nine dreadnought battleships afloat, and there have been ordered and still to launch five others. In addition there are four cruisers of the Invincible class and two others are building.

when all these ships are completed, there will be fourteen dreadnought battleships and six dreadnought cruisers.

The completed ships of the dreadnought type, and those still to be finished, are as follows:—

will be of the lightest weights, because elektron heaters carrying the hot exhaust of the motors will keep the temperature automatically even, while flying low in the tropics the airship may be perfectly cooled by ventilation. Only hand baggage will be permitted for the quick passage, other baggage going by steamer or express airship.

The sides of the hold or tunnel, five feet high and eight feet wide, will be lined with continuous tanking, containing gasoline fuel, to be forced upward into the engine rooms as needed. The outside of the hold will serve as the airship's rounded keel, and will enable the craft to float on water; elastic buffers for landing will be fixed under each engine section.

The eight motor compartments will each be equipped with one 200 horsepower motor, transmitting energy by short steel belt, in flattened tubes, to one propeller on the same side of the hull, and to auxiliary engines operating pumps that will control the gas chambers, withdrawing expanding gas and condensing it into the airship tubular frame. They will also drive powerful fans for ventilating the air spaces of the hull and the living quarters. The electric power plants, for lighting, cooking and operating the escalator, will be in the engine compartments.

The top of the hull, now the Zeppelin's observatory, will become a long hurricane deck of thin, light planking with side rails. Here will be kept service implements.

TWO SLENDER MASTS

carrying the wireless antennae and the yellow top lights; observatories for cloud triangulation, and taking the altitude of stars; searchlights, kite winch and the airship's boats, two small swift aeroplane scouts—one fore the other aft, with ample space for launching and alighting. The deck will be reached by small, winding openwork stairs through the hull. The hull will be divided into twenty gas-tight compartments, for sustaining the airship in space. Along the port and starboard sides five sets of curved aeroplane surfaces will help to lift and support the airship or steer it up and down. They will be stepped to avoid interference. Between them will be eight propellers, four on each side, at alternating levels along the hull.

It is believed that within five years such an air liner will be capable of traveling 75 miles an hour, ordinarily, and often 120 miles, in the upper levels. Two miles above the equator a planetary current encircles the globe at tremendous speed. The ashes of the eruption of Krakatoa were carried in this way around the world in fourteen days.

In ten years an airship driven 50 miles an hour may perchance make that trip in nine days, flying at a speed of 120 miles an hour, or 2,600 miles a day. Is it all a dream? Ten years ago a prophecy of German air navigators would have been received with incredulity.

The working power of an able-bodied man is about one-tenth that of a horse.

the result of minute and careful experiments, and the man himself may be unconscious of it, it is none the less true."

FRENCH POLICE PLANS.

How the Czar of Russia is Guarded When Traveling.

M. Paoli, in his reminiscences of the Czar of Russia in McClure's Magazine, shows the thoroughness with which the French police lay their plans to insure the safety of a visiting sovereign.

"We had established observation posts in all the frontier stations, posts composed of officers, who lost no time in fastening on the steps of any suspicious traveler. A special watch had to be kept along the railways over which the imperial train was to travel, and in the streets through which the procession would pass. Sentries with loaded rifles, posted at intervals on either side of the line, at the entrance and issue of tunnels, on and under bridges, prevented anyone from approaching, and had orders to raise an alarm if they saw on or near the rails any object looking in the least suspicious.

"We also identified the tenants of all the houses situated along the railway line and in the streets through which our guests were to go. As a matter of fact, what we most feared was the traditional outrage perpetrated or attempted from a window. On the other hand, we refused (contrary to what has been stated) to adopt the system employed by the Spanish, German and Italian police on the occasion of any visit from a sovereign—the system that consists in arresting all suspects during a royal guest's stay. We sent swarms of police to beat the forest and search every copse and thicket; and the chateau itself (where the royal party was to stay) was inspected from garret to cellar by our most trusted detectives. These precautions, however, seemed insufficient to our colleagues of the Russian police."

THE FAULT OF PARENTS.

One Reason Why British Reformatories Are Full.

During the hearing of a case in one of the London children's courts an official stated that the reformatories were full at the present time. He explained that this was not due to an increase in the volume of juvenile crime, but to a growing tendency on the part of parents to free themselves from their responsibilities with respect to the care of their children.

A well known Police Court missionary took a similar view, and said there is no doubt that many parents use the reformatories to shirk responsibility. They bring their children to court on the slightest pretext and seek to have them sent to a reformatory. When a boy is sent to a reformatory his parents are made to contribute so much a week toward his maintenance, but the amount is often considerably less than the cost of keeping him at home.

That fact, he concluded, induces an unscrupulous parent to make a charge of petty theft against a child, to declare that the little one is beyond control, and to ask that the offender be detained in a reformatory.

It is estimated that in 1912 Great Britain will have twenty-four dreadnoughts—including the Invincibles—as against the thirteen of Germany.

BIRD CIRCUS IN PRISON.

Trained Canaries Enliven Dull Hours of Inmates.

Trained birds are the latest thing at the Ohio penitentiary. John Atkinson, the runner in the annex, is the official bird trainer of the institution. Atkinson now has about twelve canary birds which he has trained to sing and jump, and the methods of training are the result of many anxious moments on the part of Atkinson.

In teaching the birds to jump, Atkinson has used his hand alone. Holding one hand above the other with one finger outstretched, Atkinson has taught the birds the art of jumping. The yellow songsters flock around the prisoner every time he whistles, and when he holds out his hand, one bird after another will make the jump.

First he will hold up his right hand and one bird will jump to that. He will then hold out his left hand, about two feet above the right and the first bird will then make the jump to the left. This continues until all of the canaries have had a turn at the jumping.

He has taught them to whistle by a novel means. There is a graphophone in the annex and some of the records are whistling pieces.

Atkinson will wind up the graphophone and put on one of the whistling pieces, and then each bird will be given its lesson. These lessons are proving a form of amusement to the condemned men in the annex, and Warden Jones of the penitentiary is encouraging Atkinson in his work.

BUILDING GREAT CITIES.

German Architects Plan for the Use of Future Generations.

No cities in the modern world compare with those which have arisen in Germany during the past twenty years. The paramountcy of private property does not exist in Germany. Humanity is first. The city enjoys some of the sovereignty of the Empire. It can promote the beautiful. It can destroy the ugly. It can protect its poor. The German burgomeisters are laying the foundations of the city of tomorrow as an architect lays the foundations of a forty-story skyscraper, or the designer of a world's fair plans his play city far in advance of its excavation.

In all the larger German communities, the city architects have realized the obvious. They saw that the city would continue to grow as it had in the past. Consequently in each individual city sufficient land has been included within the city limits to allow for the building that the continued growth of the city will necessitate.—Scribner's.

A BIT OF TREACHERY.

Mr. Hagenbeck's Experience With an Elephant.

Carl Hagenbeck, the most eminent owner, exhibitor and trainer of wild animals in the world, has had many adventures in his half-century of experience. Some of them are described in a recent book, entitled "Beasts and Men." On more than one occasion an elephant has come uncomfortably near putting an end to Mr. Hagenbeck's career. One of the worst accidents happened at the end of the sixties. About that time he purchased a menagerie at Trieste, which included among the other beasts a female elephant, which stood about eight feet high. It seemed to be a thoroughly good-tempered animal, its only fault being that it occasionally had the sulks—"a not uncommon characteristic," comments Mr. Hagenbeck, "in all feminine creatures."

He soon made friends with the elephant, which he named Lissy, and he never passed its stall without giving it a handful of food. He was, therefore, he believed, justified in thinking he had quite won its heart, and as it never showed any signs of violence, it did not occur to Mr. Hagenbeck that he might be dealing with a grossly deceitful creature.

The elephant was learning a trick in which it had to swing its keeper into the air with its trunk, and then slowly set him upon the ground again. The word of command which was given to the beast when it had to perform this simple exhibition was:

"Lissy, apport!"

"One day," to continue in Mr. Hagenbeck's own words, "I found Lissy alone in her stable, the keeper being absent. It must have been a devil that made me feel a desire to be raised on high by her, after the manner of her affectionate treatment of her keeper. I stroked and fed her, and then taking hold of her trunk, called out the word of command:

"Lissy, apport!"

"Then followed one of the most vilely treacherous acts of which I have ever heard. Lissy began to obey the order, but I soon felt that she was bent on mischief, for the embrace of her trunk was unpleasantly vigorous, and I soared high into the air."

"But I was not quietly deposited once more upon my feet."

"Instead of this, Lissy dashed me violently against the wooden barrier in front of her stall, and I went flying over into the menagerie."

"I lay almost senseless upon the ground until the old keeper, Philippe, appeared to help me home."

"Fortunately no bones were broken, but I was terribly battered and bruised, and for weeks could only hobble about with great pain."

AND MUSIC'S POWER TO CURE.

Results Obtained in Sufferers from Infantile Paralysis.

A demonstration has just been given in London, England, of the results obtained from the scientific use of music and rhythm in infantile paralysis. The patients who assisted at the demonstration were at one time considered incurable at the general hospitals.

The first patient was a boy of 6, whose right arm had been totally paralyzed following an attack of acute infantile paralysis. A drum and his zeal for beating it so to become a professional drummer when he grows up have been his salvation. What massage and electrical treatment alone could not do constant working at his drumming has accomplished, and now the paralyzed arm is almost as useful as the other.

The second case was a child of 3 who six months ago was totally paralyzed in both legs. Her treatment consisted of "marching" to an inspiring tune played on the piano while seated on the edge of a low wooden chair.

The most interesting case was a girl of 10, who three years ago was refused admission to one of the leading London hospitals as being hopelessly incurable. The right leg and arm were almost useless, while paralysis of certain of the throat and tongue muscles made the child's speech almost incoherent.

Dull and mentally deficient in many ways, her interest in musical sounds gave the clue to the treatment. Singing exercises were devised in which to pronounce the vowels correctly the semi-paralyzed muscles had to be used, while a wooden clapper and a bell to be sounded by the paralyzed foot and arm respectively completed the apparatus.

After a cure extending over three years this patient, now a normal looking girl, sang at the demonstration a number of songs in a rich full voice, and then skipped rope to show the control the musical treatment has gained over the injured limp muscles.

WORSE THAN ALCOHOL.

In Sections of Ireland Tea Drinking is Most Active.

I have had something to say recently about the growth of the temperance movement in Ireland, but if the reports of the inspectors of national schools which have just been issued are correct a campaign is needed almost against tea drinking, writes a Belfast correspondent. The most scathing indictment of the "cup that cheers" is drawn by J. P. Dalton, who reports on the teaching of cookery on the Galway circuit and who does not hesitate to say that tea in some parts of Ireland at least is a worse evil than alcohol. Here are a few passages from his report:

"Of the many abuses that require correction, one in particular must be vigorously combated if the race is to be preserved from deterioration. The use of tea is now carried to such dangerous excess that it ranks before alcohol as an enemy of the public health.

"To aggravate the situation, it is in the very poorest parts of the country that the tea evil is most active and harmful. Outside the

JUDGE'S STRONG WORDS

DEATH SENTENCE WAS A REMARKABLE ONE.

Judge Benedict Pronounced Them on a Cruel Murderer in New Mexico.

Probably the best anecdote of Judge Benedict of New Mexico, says the Green Bag, is that told with regard to his sentence of death pronounced upon one Jose Maria Martin, who was convicted of murder in the District Court of Taos county under a state of facts showing great brutality and with absolutely no mitigating circumstances. Judge Benedict said:

"Jose Maria Martin, stand up! Jose Maria Martin, you have been indicted, tried and convicted by a jury of your countrymen of the crime of murder and the Court is now about to pass upon you the dread sentence of the law. As a usual thing, Jose Maria Martin, it is a painful duty for the Judge of a court of justice to pronounce upon a human being the sentence of death. There is something horrible about it and the mind of the Court naturally revolts from the performance of such a duty. Happily, however, your case is relieved of all such unpleasant features and the Court takes positive delight in sentencing you to death.

"YOU ARE A YOUNG MAN,

Jose Maria Martin; apparently of good physical constitution and robust health. Ordinarily you might have looked forward to many years of life, and the Court has no doubt you have, and have expected to die at a green old age; but you are about to be cut off on account of your own act. Jose Maria Martin, it is now the spring time; in a little while the grass will be springing up green in these beautiful valleys and on these broad mesas and mountainsides flowers will be blooming; birds will be singing their sweet carols and nature will be putting on her most gorgeous and the most attractive robes, and life will be pleasant and men will want to stay; but none of this for you, Jose Maria Martin; the flowers will not bloom for you, Jose Maria Martin; the birds will not carol for you, Jose Maria Martin; when these things come to gladden the senses of men you will be occupying a space about six by two beneath the sod and the green grass and those beautiful flowers will be growing above your lowly head.

"The sentence of the Court is that you be taken from this place to the county jail; that you be kept there safely and securely confined, in the custody of the sheriff, until the day appointed for your execution. Be very careful, Mr. Sheriff, that he have no opportunity to escape and that you have him at the appointed place at the appointed time. That you be so kept, Jose Maria Martin, until—Mr. Clerk, on what day of the month does Friday, about two weeks from this time come?"

"MARCH 22, YOUR HONOR."

"Very well, until Friday, the twenty-second day of March, when you will be taken by the sheriff from

FOR THE WANT OF FOOD

125 DEATHS IN ENGLAND IN ONE YEAR.

Instances of Men Formerly Well-to-do Who Became Destitute in Old Age.

The tragic fact that no fewer than 125 persons died of starvation, or had their death accelerated by privation, in England and Wales in 1908 is revealed by a return of the Local Government Board.

Of these deaths 52 occurred in London and 773 in the provinces. Details of each case are added, and these in many instances make pathetic reading.

A sad case is that of a man, "J. D.," formerly a bank manager of Southwark, aged sixty-four. Fainting from the results of starvation and exposure, he fell on a stone corridor, fractured his skull, and died of the effects.

TOO PROUD TO BEG.

Another example of distress is given by the case of an old agricultural laborer. He had been formerly employed in a brewery, which had pensioned him off. But about three years before his death the pension had to cease, owing to the financial difficulties of the brewery. "Since then," grimly states the return, "deceased had only obtained occasional work, apparently too proud to ask for relief." At the last he was unable to work through rheumatism. But he perished with stolid heroism, without applying "to his children or to the relieving officer for any help or assistance."

It is work that is wanted is the moral that runs through this gloomy return.

PITIFUL CASES.

Another case at Bethnal Green was that of a man of 82, whose death was hastened by "want of food and necessities of life," but who declined to go to the workhouse.

A pathetic case was that of a man, aged sixty, an architect, who "died in the workhouse from congestion of the lungs, after destitution at home." He was also an inventor, two uncompleted models of an automatic piano-player being found in the room he occupied in Holborn.

MEETING A RHINOCEROS.

A Hunter's Exciting Experience in Africa.

It was an adventurous afternoon that Lieut. Col. J. H. Patterson describes in his book, "In the Grip of the Nyika," and there was a useful lesson to be learned from the experience. It is never well to go down a precipitous, narrow track into a bush-covered ravine in wild country in Africa without first assuring oneself by much stone-throwing and hallooing that there is no dangerous beast lurking at the bottom. In the following incident no such precaution was taken.

I was mounted, as usual on Aladdin, and accompanied by my two Masai, Abbudi and Mellauw.

To aggravate the situation, it is in the very poorest parts of the country that the tea evil is most active and harmful. Outside the slums of the cities and larger towns there are no people in the British Islands who have to endure a more miserable lot than the congested population of the Connaught seaboard; and yet the carts and vans of the itinerant tea vendors are to be seen every day going in and out among the most backward and inaccessible Connemara villages.

It is only the cheap sorts of tea that reach these poor people; and, let the quality be good or bad, the tea is so prepared for use that the liquid, when drunk, has the properties of a slow poison. SYSTEM ON A DINING CAR.

Every Inch of Space in Its Little Kitchen is Economized.

The kitchen of a dining car is a striking example of what can be done in economizing space. Every inch is used.

Water tanks are suspended from the ceiling. One wall is lined with the big range and heating ovens, while on the other are storage boxes, receptacles for pans, pots and other utensils, and a row of cupboards up under the ceiling.

At one end, between the kitchen and the dining car proper, is a little pantry which serves as a sort of vestibule. That is where the waiters place their orders and receive dishes.

Every separate article of food and equipment has its place, says the Woman's Home Companion. Every corner and nook in the car has a particular function. The silver is in one place, the milk and cheese in another, the meat in another, and so on through the list. Everything perishable is kept in a refrigerator.

While the car is in action the conductor from his position between dining room and kitchen keeps his eyes upon the ten tables and endeavors to see that none of the diners is neglected. For all the supplies on the car he is held to strict account. On his trip sheet, as it is called, is put a list of everything taken on the car when it starts out. A record of all articles sold is entered upon the sheet, and when the car comes home again all that has not been sold must be on hand.

The equipment of a dining car conforms to standards, just as do locomotives, trucks, rails and ties. Dishes are made according to established patterns, each piece of china having the company's monogram upon it. The same is true of the linen, silver, menu holders—everything. Thus a loss can be easily traced. The waiters are allowed $20 a month for breakage. All damage in excess of that, though, they have to pay for, and the cost is divided among them equally.

on what day of the month does Friday, about two weeks from this time come?

"MARCH 22, YOUR HONOR."

"Very well, until Friday, the twenty-second day of March, when you will be taken by the sheriff from your place of confinement to some safe and convenient spot within the county—that is in your discretion, Mr. Sheriff; you are only confined to the limits of the county—and that you there be hanged by the neck until you are dead, and—the Court was about to add, Jose Maria Martin, 'may God have mercy on your soul,' but the Court will not assume the responsibility of asking an all wise Providence to do that which a jury of your peers has refused to do. The Lord couldn't have mercy on your soul."

"However, if you affect any religious belief or are connected with any religious organization it might be well enough for you to send for your priest or your minister and get from him—well, such consolation as you can—but the Court advises you to place no reliance upon anything of that kind. Mr. Sheriff, remove the prisoner."

RUSH TO MARRY IN FRANCE.

Many Couples Take Advantage of a New Law.

Since the promulgation of the French marriage law of 1907 there have been more weddings in France than at any period since the beginning of the last century with the exception of the years 1813 and 1872, in the former of which men married hoping to escape service in the army, while in the latter many weddings took place which had been delayed by the war with Germany.

One way in which it helps persons intending to marry is that it has freed those who are over 30 from the necessity of procuring the whole series of documents and certificates upon which the Civil Code insisted. Neither is it necessary now to obtain the consent of the parents; indeed after the age of 21 it may be dispensed with provided it is shown that due notice has been sent them.

The result is that many people of the lower classes are now married who might formerly have been tempted to do without the ceremony because it was impossible to collect the needed papers or because of the caprice of parents who refused their consent for no valid reason. What the relief thus obtained means may be understood when it is explained that in the case of persons who had lost their parents and were engaged to be married nineteen documents were required by the Civil Code of 1804, including two birth certificates, two certificates of residence, two of non-opposition, the usual military record book, four certificates of the death of the parents and eight of the grandparents, for the entire set of which $10 had to be paid.

It is in the large towns that the beneficial results of the new law have been most conspicuous.

ing and hallooing that there is no dangerous beast lurking at the bottom. In the following incident no such precaution was taken.

I was mounted, as usual, on Aladdin, and accompanied by my two Masai, Abbudi and Mellauw. I saw plenty of game in all directions, and on my way passed quite close by and watched a cow rhino with its little baby, a few days old, beside it. The young one looked very much like a pig.

Soon afterward my progress was barred by a deep ravine with very steep sides. As it would have been impossible to take a horse down where I struck it, I walked along the edge for some distance, till at last I found an animal path, which we could just manage to follow to the bottom, although it was somewhat precipitous and narrow.

Mellauw went down first, I followed, and last of all came Abbudi leading Aladdin. The ravine was a wide one—at least thirty yards across at the bottom—and was covered with dense bush.

When we got down, Mellauw was just about to force his way through the undergrowth when he suddenly stopped and whispered to me, "Ewana, fow!"—"Master, a rhino!"

I asked under my breath, "Wa-pi—"Where?" and he replied in a frightened undertone, "Hapa, kariba sana!"—"Here, just beside us."

There was not room enough to turn Aladdin, so I signaled to Abbudi to back him up the side of the ravine, while Mellauw and I quickly scrambled to what safety we could secure behind a tree. Here we waited for the expected charge of the now disturbed and suspicious brute.

I held my rifle ready, and we hardly dared breathe while we listened to its angry snorts and watched Abbudi and Aladdin slowly making their way backward toward the summit.

Very luckily for us, the wind was blowing strongly from the rhino in our direction. Had it been the reverse, the beast would undoubtedly have scented us, and charged while we were all in the narrow path, and might possibly have killed or maimed all of us, as there was no way of escape. As it was, the creature stood undecided for a few moments, sniffing and snorting loudly; and then, not being able to make us out, it crashed off out of the ravine in the opposite direction.

I was hugely relieved and pleased to see its broad black back show now and again through the scrub as the animal swiftly made its way up the far bank of the nullah and disappeared into the bush.

HIS PECULIAR EMPLOYMENT

The death recently occurred at Blackpool, England, of Mr. Thomas Westhead, whose chief occupation for some years was of a peculiar nature. Mr. Westhead was employed by the late Mr. James Parrot, an extensive local benefactor, to attend his St. Bernard dog. When Mr. Parr died he left the dog a legacy of $5 a week, and Mr. Westhead a similar amount to look after him. The money now reverts to the "Parrot deserving poor fund."

Schemes for the erection of artisans' dwellings at Carlow are being pushed forward with much vigor. The Urban Council have applied for a loan of $25,000 for the erection of at least seventeen cottages in Graigue.

BRITISH SHIPBUILDING.

There is Unusual Activity at the Present Time.

This will be a boom year for British shipbuilding and engineering industries. From the returns compiled by Lloyd's Register of Shipping it appears that, excluding warships, there were 335 vessels of 1,057,636 tons gross under construction in the United Kingdom on March 31. They included 349 steamships with a gross tonnage of 1,052,887 and thirty-seven sailing ships of 4,749 tons.

The figures of the warship tonnage show that 77 vessels with 303,685 tons displacement are being built. They include 6 battleships, 2 armored cruisers, 9 protected cruisers, 2 third class cruisers, 30 torpedo boat destroyers and 11 submarines, all of British nationality.

Since these statistics were compiled four more ships, including the 22,500 ton British battleship Thunderer, have been laid down. A little later in the year work will be begun upon the two Dreadnought cruisers for the Australian and New Zealand fleets and by the close of the financial year 1910-11 the five new armored ships provided for in the new naval programme will have been commenced.

During the year seventeen armored ships will be under construction for the British and colonial fleets. Besides these vessels there are being built in British yards two Dreadnoughts for the Brazilian navy and British firms have practically secured orders for three Turkish battleships at a cost of $25,000,000.

In addition to these armored ships a large number of small cruisers is being built or has been provided for. Two are nearing completion for the Brazilian navy and three are to be built for Australia. There are also ten destroyers ordered for the Brazilian navy, while four are to be laid down for the Argentine Republic and one for Denmark.

The total cost of warships and floating docks to be constructed in the United Kingdom during the coming eighteen months is put down at $296,250,000. The proportion of the cost of shipbuilding which is spent for labor is estimated at 70 per cent. Spread over thirty months, this means that for each of 120 weeks nearly $1,000,000 will be paid out in wages, giving constant employment for that period to an average of 182,000 men at $8.50 a week.

KING EDWARD IS DEAD

The People of Britain and of the Dominion Beyond the Seas Mourn for Their Beloved Monarch

London, May 7.—The official bulletin announcing the King's death read as follows:—

May 6, 11.50 p.m.—His Majesty the King breathed his last at 11.45 to-night in the presence of her Majesty Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Princess Royal, Duchess of Fife, Princess Victoria and Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyll:

Signed
LAKING, REID,
POWELL,
DAWSON.

London, May 6.—Edward the Seventh died a quarter of an hour before midnight. His illness, in its final stages, progressed with terrifying rapidity. It was only at half past three this afternoon that he was "prevailed" upon to allow himself to be laid in bed. Since morning he had been reclining in a invalid chair. At 3.30 he had a violent attack of coughing, which so exhausted him that he held out no longer against the wishes of his physicians. He still retained full consciousness, and about five o'clock asked for news about his horse "Witch of the Air," which was running at Kempton Park this afternoon. He was told it had won.

Not long afterwards it became apparent that he was rapidly growing worse. All five physicians who had been called into consultation were in attendance, and soon after their public announcement that his condition was critical the Royal patient began to show signs of the approaching dissolution. He sank rapidly, and at 11.45 passed away.

THE NEW KING.

In the eyes of the British Constitution the King never dies. The death of one Monarch, technically termed the demise of the Crown, is automatically followed by the accession of his successor. Thus, when King Edward breathed his last, in the presence of his family, among whom was of course his eldest son, the Prince of Wales, the British Empire came into possession of a new King.

The Prince and Princess of Wales drove to the Palace from Marlborough House at half-past ten, and remained in the room next to the King's study.

Highness is a very able nurse, and she also rendered some assistance in the sick chamber. The Duchess of Albany was another member of the Royal family who came to see his Majesty, and when she left was weeping bitterly.

CALLERS AT THE PALACE.

Early in the afternoon long strings of motor cars and carriages began to fill the court yard at the entrance to Buckingham Palace, and they continued without intermission until 6 o'clock. All the well-known people of London were leaving calls and making inquiries, politicians, Ambassadors, dignitaries of the Church, great leaders and men of note in the world, of sport, writers, painters, one or two actors even. Every class was represented in the line which advanced slowly to the door, and then drove away with saddened faces, looking out upon the people gathered round the gates. When the Lord Chamberlain, Lord Althorp, left the palace smiling it was taken as a hopeful sign, and when it was rumored that both Sir Francis Laking and Sir James Reid had gone out for a ride their spirits went up still further. The long delay between bulletins was taken to mean that at all events his Majesty was no worse.

DESERTED STREETS.

While the sun shone more brilliantly than it had done any day this year, the people seemed to extract the utmost particle of hope which the medical bulletins conveyed, but when evening came, cold and dismal, with rain drizzling from the heavy skies, the crowds lost heart, and soon after the issue of the later reports announcing that his Majesty's condition was most grave, and that the hoped for improvement had not set in, the streets were practically empty. Pedestrians were rare. Cabs and taxis passed by at intervals instead of in ceaseless file, and motor buses rumbled past empty or nearly empty of passengers.

FEW IN THE THEATRES.

It was curious to see how, outside one theatre, where a popular success was running, the crowd which had formed alongside the pit and gallery doors melted away before the door were opened. It was evident that these people, to whom a visit to a theatre was such a treat that they would stand for hours waiting to secure a seat, had no stomach for musical comedy while their King lay at death's door. All the West End theatres were practically empty this evening. Even the physiognomy of the streets showed such a change that servant on the railing, there were thousands wailing and murmuring through the crowd as the old man in Royal livery walked across the palace yard to the gates and fastened up the bulletin. In absolute silence those in the front ranks read the announcement. "Read it aloud!" cried many in the rear, but no one had the heart to read the sad news aloud. A woman cried, "Oh, it cannot be! Oh, God, save his Majesty." The Royal Standard which floats over Buckingham Palace when the King is in residence there, and to which many anxious glances had been cast throughout the day, is always taken down at sunset, and when shortly after the 6.30 bulletin was posted it fluttered down, many people thought the end had already come, and policemen went amid the crowd explaining that the flag was only being taken down because the sun had set.

NEW MONARCH PROCLAIMED.

London, May 7.—King George V. was proclaimed this afternoon. The proclamation was approved by the privy council at 4 o'clock.

The council met in the throne room at St. James' Palace under the presidency of the Earl of Crewe, who officiated in the absence of Viscount Wolverhampton. The new monarch was given the title of King George V.

The King, who had driven over from Marlborough House, waited in a room adjoining the council chamber while the lengthy formalities leading up to the actual proclamation were proceeding.

With to-day's ceremony, and in his forty-fifth year, the second son among them was a prince who was such a great son, the Prince of Wales, the British Empire came into possession of a new King.

The Prince and Princess of Wales drove to the Palace from Marlborough House at half-past ten, and remained in the room next to that in which the King lay. Here the Queen and Princess Victoria also spent the day. The King was very glad to be able to command once more the services of the nurse who cared for him during his recovery from the operation in 1901, and several times sent out word to his family that he was as comfortable as he could expect to be.

THE QUEEN'S DEVOTION.

The Queen has watched over his Majesty with the utmost devotion ever since returning on Thursday night. She had heard of the King's illness on the way to Calais, and hastened her arrival in England as much as possible. Her Majesty was up nearly all night, staying by the King's bedside, and only catching brief rests in the couch in her sitting room adjoining the King's chamber. Her Majesty saw no one except the physicians and Miss Fletcher, the nurse, outside the members of the Royal family. Princess Victoria shared in the long vigil, her Royal Highness helping her mother to bear with fortitude their trying ordeal. Sitting for hours by the bedside, her Majesty did not relax her loving vigil once. She watched the doctors at their work, they also never leaving the sick room except for the briefest intervals. The Princess of Wales joined her shortly after 10 o'clock yesterday morning. Her Royal visit to a theatre was such a treat that they would stand for hours waiting to secure a seat, had no stomach for musical comedy while their King lay at death's door. All the West End theatres were practically empty this evening. Even the physiognomy of the streets showed such a change that thoroughfares which are normally scenes of life, bustle and gaiety resembled streets in a city through which death had stalked.

HOPE TURNED TO DESPAIR.

After the first shock which the news in the morning papers had given to the great masses of the population in London there was a period when hope ran high. The earliest reports of the day were that the King had passed a good night, and with the memories of his remarkable recovery after his attack of perithplitis in his coronation year, his subjects set great store on his ability to pull through the present illness. When the bulletin, dated 11 a.m., stated that his condition still gave rise to grave anxiety, and it was seen that five doctors had signed it, two consultants having been added to those in attendance yesterday, there was commensurate depression. Still the sun was shining brightly in the blue sky, and buoyant spring was in the air and kept up courage. But with the evening bulletin hope was abandoned.

SORROW OF THE POPULACE.

As the business day came to a close the crowd before the palace grew in numbers, and when 6.20 a bulletin with its announcement that the King's condition was critical was posted by an old Royal born to King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra becomes the ruler of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, of the British Dominions beyond the seas, King, Defender of the Faith, and Emperor of India.

PROCLAIM NEW KING.

London, May 9.—As Big Ben struck the hour of nine this morning George V. was, with all ancient ceremony, to-day proclaimed King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Defender of the Faith and Emperor of India. Four heralds arrayed in mediaeval uniform of scarlet, heavily braided with gold, mounted the balcony of Friars Court at St. James' Palace and blew through their long silver trumpets. After this fanfare the Garter King-at-Arms advanced to the front of the red draped balcony and, in a loud voice, read the proclamation of the new King, which ends by calling "God Save the King."

An enormous crowd raised the cry of "God Save the King," and the great echoing shout rang along Pall Mall. Men bared their heads, and on the instant hundreds of flags were run from half-mast to mast-head.

In the quadrangle of Buckingham Palace one of the bandmen, in a rich tenor voice, sang "Nearer My God to Thee," and some women who had been crying softly in the great press before the gates, joined in with tremulous voices.

Then through the streets of London lined with 7,000 troops and thousands of police rode the procession to the Royal Exchange. At Temple Bar the march was interrupted, according to long established custom, by the Lord Mayor and the members of the City Corporation, who challenged the heraldic party in order to preserve the ancient rights of their city.

EXPLOSION AT HULL, QUE.

Ten Persons Were Killed and More Than One Hundred Hurt.

Ottawa, May 8. Boys playing in the fields started a brush fire which caused the explosion of "Virite" this afternoon of the magazine of the General Explosives Co. in Hull, Que. Ten deaths now and at least twenty cases of serious injury constitute the tale of casualties, while the damage to Hull and to the neighboring City of Ottawa may reach $100,000. The list of dead may be added to.

The factory comprised a number of small buildings on the outskirts of Hull. It was devoted to the manufacture of a specially powerful explosive used in railway construction and similar work. It is under ordinary conditions of handling extremely safe.

Uneasiness has been felt in Hull at the situation of the factory. While on the outskirts of the town, it was situated within two or three hundred yards of a number of shacks inhabited by poor people. The city council had taken steps to oblige the company to remove its establishment, but the litigation resulted in a defeat for the municipality, the latest judgment in the case having been rendered a short time ago.

The fire started by the small boys extended about 5 p.m. to a building used as a workshop. This burned quietly for about three-quarters of an hour, when the building in which the detonators were stored, exploded with a sharp report, which was heard all over the city of Ottawa.

About two minutes afterwards the main magazine, which contained about five tons of the explosive, detonated with a tremendous shock. The noise was peculiarly sharp and enormous clouds of smoke rose to a great height in the air, while stones, many of which were of great size, were showered upon the adjoining area, many of them wrecking buildings hundreds of yards away. Thousands of windows were shattered in both Hull and Ottawa.

The fire had attracted a great number of spectators, and it was due to their presence that the terribly heavy casualty list is to be ascribed. The hail of falling stones beat them down in numbers. In particular, a bridge over Brewery Creek was thronged with onlookers, and it is feared that some of those struck down are submerged beneath the waters of the stream.

All the hospitals of Ottawa are filled with the injured and including injuries by falling stones, it is believed that from 100 to 150 casualties have occurred.

With the exception of hogs, which are firm at $8.75 to $9 per cwt., the light stock is easier. Sheep and lambs are quoted from 25c to 50c lower.

WILL CIRCLE THE GLOBE.

Two Hundred British Warships to Take Part in Great Cruise.

A despatch from London says: It is learned that the admiralty has planned a two years' trip for the fleet of British battleships to take place next autumn. By that time it will be possible for a 20,000 ton battleship of the Princess Royal type—the largest in the world—to be at the head of the second naval process on to encircle the globe. Two hundred ships of all classes will be included. Accompanying the great Dreadnoughts will be fifteen submarines. This will be the first time in naval history that these little craft will be tested by the severe strain of ocean service. During the voyage, which will take two years, the warships will call at various foreign ports. The fleet will be subdivided for visits to Chinese and Indian ports. Then the fleets will reassemble in the Yellow Sea preparatory to long stops in Japanese harbors. From Japan the fleet will make the long trip to San Francisco.

FAMINE IN WINNIPEG.

Building Materials are Scarce in the Prairie Capital.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Winnipeg is suffering from the greatest famine in building materials in the past six years. Common brick has advanced $4 a thousand, timber and dimension lumber are $2 higher than a week ago, and shingles are selling for almost whatever dealers dare to ask. Cement is still selling at 75 cents a barrel over last year's price, and the supply is very short. Good common brick is practically cleaned out, and all the local brick yards have disposed of their supplies. Contractors are estimating a hold-up of at least three weeks on big jobs.

The Duke of Connaught Will Succeed Earl Grey.

London, May 10.—The Express understands that the Duke of Connaught is likely to succeed Earl Grey, it being the particular wish of the late King that his brother should receive the appointment as Governor-General of Canada. The official announcement, The Express says, may be expected shortly. It is also suggested that the Duke of Connaught should open the first CROP CONDITIONS GOOD.

Seeding Completed at Most Points in the West.

A despatch from Winnipeg says: Crop conditions throughout the Canadian prairies were never better than at present. The weekly C. P. R. crop report, which was issued on Wednesday, shows that seeding is completed at many points along the line, and where it is not as yet finished, only about 10 or 15 per cent. of it remains to be accomplished. Weather conditions are favorable, considerable rain being reported. Slight falls of snow in other sections also helped greatly in supplying moisture. The increased acreage will be 20 per cent. The United States immigration is responsible for much increase. Growing grain has not been damaged by snow.

REMARKABLE EVIDENCE

Of Prosperity Shown by Government Statement.

One of the most remarkable showings made by any Bank in Canada is made evident on the part of the Traders Bank by their Government statement recently submitted, showing that the deposits of the bank have increased during the first three months of this year over One and a Half Millions of Dollars, bringing their total deposits up to $31,200,000.

An equally pleasing increase is shown in the total assets to the Bank. The Bank reports to the Government an increase of its total assets to the grand total sum of $42,000,000, which is an increase of over $2,000,000 over the report made at the end of the year.

There is perhaps no Bank in Canada which is showing such magnificent evidences of prosperity and such rapid growth as the Traders Bank at the present time.

Survey cameras for use from balloons are now in constant use in the British army.

MINISTER WHO TESTED ZAM-BUK.

Rev. P. F. Laugill, "The Manse," Carp, Ont., writes: "Some considerable time ago I began using Zam-Buk with a view to testing it thoroughly. I am troubled with eczema, which is always worse in the early part of winter, and seems to leave me about spring. I tried Zam-Buk immediately my hands started to break out, and am pleased to say that it checked the disease, which is more than I can say for anything
I have ever before tried. We now have Zam-Buk in the house continuously, and I carry a small sample box in my pocket. One evening I happened to look in where an old man had met with an accident a week before, and had lost a finger nail. I dressed the wound with Zam-Buk and left the sample box with them. I have seen the old gentleman since, and the injury is cured."

"On another occasion a farmer called at 'The Manse,' and I notice ed a rag on his finger. Enquiring about the injury, I learned that he had somehow taken a piece of flesh off, and the wound had started to fester. I gave him about a third of a box of Zam-Buk and a few days later he said 'That's great salve of yours, my finger is now doing fine.'"

Test Zam-Buk! Don't go by hearsay! You will find it gives the best results in all cases of eczema, ringworm, festering sores, piles, cuts, burns, face sores, eruptions, and all skin injuries and diseases. All

GUINEAS AND POUNDS

More Than the Mere Shilling Difference Between Them.

ridiculous my salary would be paid me in pounds sterling, for then I'd be supposed to be working for pay and, according to English ideas, no longer a gentleman.

"These two kinds of money, guineas and pounds, show up in many curious ways. All professional men are paid in guineas. If you are running a big private school you make a charge in guineas for tuition, and parents of your pupils pay you in guineas because you're supposed to be merely engaging in an altruistic, philanthropic project of building brawn and brain for Britain. But you pay the teachers in your school in pounds sterling, for they're supposed to be working for pay, not for love.

"If you're a doctor you make your bills for professional services out in guineas. Barristers are paid in guineas. Horse race prizes are given in guineas for all gentlemen's races.

"The most curious mixture of all is the clergyman's pay. This is a queer mixture of commercial and professional ideas. The charge of a parish is known as a living and is paid in pounds sterling, but a wedding or a christening takes place in the parish the clergyman receives a personal fee, always guineas instead of pounds.

"Artists are paid in guineas. The late James MacNeill Whistler, who had a delightful habit of turning a keen wit on friends and making enemies thereby, was once paid for a work of art in pounds sterling, a delicate implication that Whistler was a dauber and a tyro.

"Two trades are paid in guineas for goods purchased, but other trades are paid in pounds sterling. These trades are the interior decorator and the jeweler. The jeweler's goods are supposed to be works of art, and such commercial articles as watch chains and watches are priced in guineas. Certain swell and exclusive London tailors, to whom you have to be introduced, by the way, charge you in guineas for the coats and trousers they consent to make for you.

"Directors of companies were formerly paid in guineas for their attendance. They are now paid in pounds sterling, but when a pound sterling is in minted gold it isn't a pound sterling any more, but a sovereign.

"The idea is that directors of companies are always feed in gold, and as sovereigns only are coined now they are paid in sovereigns. The only exception is the directorate of the Bank of England. The members of the board are paid in golden guineas, part of a small store kept in the bank and dated in the early years of the last century.

"A gentleman wagers with his friends in guineas. He buys a hunter or a pony polo from a friend in guineas, but in pounds from a horse trader. But if he is buying a work horse from a friend and equal he pays in pounds sterling.

"If a gentleman wagers with a bookmaker at a race track he posts his bet in pounds. If he tries to break the

THE TAIL OF A COMET

It Pays Dearly For Its Brilliant
Gaseous Display.

FORMED BY LIGHT AND HEAT.

Far Away the Comet is a Globular Mass, and as it Nears the Sun the Action of That Body Untwines the Tail, Which is Never Recovered.

Traveling as comets do in very elongated ellipses, with the sun in one of the foci, as the attracting point is called, most of their journey is spent in slow unevenness far away from the hearth of the system—hearth is just what the word focus means. They are then small globular aggregations, sluggish and dim—a little roundish nebula in look. Such they appear when first described in the telescope coming in from space, for they are rarely seen at all until they have entered within the orbit of Mars. Distance in part, but still more their own behavior till then, keeps them hid.

Within this nebulousity, known as the head, appears as it nears us a bright spot, the nucleus. Suddenly there occurs a complete change in the deportment of the body, one which renders it the observed of all observers, and in less civilized times occasionally its being held the harbinger of distress, disease and death.

As soon as the comet gets near enough the heat of the sun sets up commotion within it. By Very's determination of the temperature of the unblanketed sunward side of the moon we are enabled to infer that this heat is great at the earth's distance from the sun in spite of the cold of space. This temperature is 353 degrees F.

And as the comet approaches the sun this heat must increase inversely as the square of the distance. At half the radius of the earth orbit it is already four times as great above absolute zero, at a quarter sixteen times, and so on increasingly, the temperature rising into thousands of degrees.

No wonder the comet acts as it does. It at once becomes uneasy, waxes in light and, as the spectroscope reveals, disruptive electric discharges start in it which let out the imprisoned gases. Then begins that spectacular career of perihelion passage which makes the comet so superb an object and for which it pays so dear. The gases which are thus thrust out from the interior of the separate meteorites, together with such particles of the iron as are made gaseous by the heat, fall prey to another force besides gravitation. This force is the impact of light itself, the light emitted by the sun.

That so immaterial a thing as a beam of light can have power to move even a pith ball is a conception not easy to grasp. Yet there is no doubt of the fact, theoretically calculated years ago by Clerk Maxwell from his electro-magnetic theory of light, for the gaseous particles proceed to be repelled by the sun at enormous speed, each behaving exactly as it should by mathematical analysis if such were the occasioning cause. Evidently the light waves have a propelling power in the direction of their own motion equal to their own speed.

Why, then, is it that the planets betray no such effect in spite of their size? The answer is, because of that very size. Gravity acts on the mass, a matter of three dimensions; the light force on the surface of the body, a matter of two. As a body diminishes in size, therefore, its surface bears a

MONEY CASTE IN ENGLAND.

The Pound Is Straight Business Money, but the Guinea Is the Gentleman's Money—A Nice Distinction In Charges and In Payments.

"Funny thing," said the writer, who had just received a check for £2 2s. from London, "how the editor over in England paid me in guineas, not in English pounds. In fact, it would be an insult if the editor had simply paid me £2.

"They've two kinds of money over there. One kind is straight business money. An even £2 would have meant in effect that I had performed a routine job of some kind, such as compiling a table of statistics for the editor, and that I was being paid for mechanical labor.

"But the editor adds an extra shilling to every pound he pays me. This means that I am not supposed to have performed any labor at all, but to have created a work of art and submitted this work of art—otherwise literature—for art's sake.

"My check is written 'Two guineas,' and the envelope in which it is sent is addressed 'John Smith, Esq.' This in effect is a second recognition that I have submitted a piece of literary art. Yet the figures on the check are '£2 2s.' to prevent errors in book-keeping.

"If I'd been on the staff of the pe-nas, but in pounds, in a horse trader. But if he is buying a work horse from a friend and equal he pays in pounds sterling.

"If a gentleman wagers with a bookmaker at a race track he posts his bet in pounds. If he tries to break the bank at Monte Carlo he puts up his wagers on the roulette wheel in gold twenty franc pieces and speaks of his winnings or losses in pounds sterling while he mentions his winnings or losses at bridge, paid in gold, in guineas.

"There are hundreds of delicate distinctions in British etiquette in the matter of money. One of the most curious is that of a certain London club where the members receive their change in gold, silver and penny postage stamps, neither paper money nor copper being given, and gentlemen are not supposed to know any money except coined gold and silver."

tray no such effect in spite of their size? The answer is, because of that very size. Gravity acts on the mass, a matter of three dimensions; the light force on the surface of the body, a matter of two. As a body diminishes in size, therefore, its surface bears a greater and greater ratio to its mass until when small enough the second force is the stronger of the two.

This relation is betrayed in the conduct of the tail. The imprisoned gases, heated to expulsion on the sunward side of the comet, rise toward it in a series of exquisite mantling envelopes, as if the comet's head were veiling itself from the too ardent gaze of the sun. Then, after rising to a certain height, their initial impetus overcome, they fall back, repelled by the light waves, although still attracted by gravity, and are driven out to form the tail of the comet, fresh envelopes taking their place.

Sometimes only a single tail is formed, but at others two or even three are shot out, and when this happens one is nearly straight, one curved and one greatly bent. Now, calculation shows that the repelling force in the case of the first is fourteen times that of gravity, in the second two and two-tenths times, or something less, and in the third only about one-fifth of gravity. But these are the very ratios which particles of hydrogen gas, of the hydrocarbons and of iron or sodium would respectively show.

As the comet approaches the sun the display becomes more violent and more spectacular. Finer and wilder grows the pageant, the "hairy star" loosening its tresses, which had stood sedately coiled about its head amid the depths of space, to stream in gorgeous gleams behind it as it pays its orbital obeisance to the ruler of its course. It seemingly backs away in keeping with the etiquette of royalty, turning always its face sunward as it retreats whence it came.

But it pays dearly for its display. The matter going to form the tail can never be recovered, but is driven farther away. At each successive return to the sun some of its mass and brilliance is thus lost, and this is why the periodic comets, those that have made many visits, are such small and inconspicuous objects. It is only the comets of long ellipses and very distant habit of which the perihelion pageant is so fine—Youth's Companion.

A Great Work of Art.

It was Apelles who visited the studio of Protogenes in Rome and, finding the artist absent, drew a thin colored line in such a way that the Roman knew that only his Grecian brother could have done it. But, not to be outdone, Protogenes drew a thinner line upon that of Apelles, and when this was seen Apelles drew a third line upon that of Protogenes. This panel was then looked upon as the greatest work of art, so says the story, in the palace of the Caesars.

A Shady Place.

A hotel keeper near New York city is a Frenchman, and his family know little more about English than he does. His suburban hotel stands in the center of a square filled with large trees. When the proprietor wanted to call attention to this advantage he put on his cards, "The most shady hotel around New York." The reputation of the place is beyond reproach, and the proprietor does not know yet why so many persons smile when they read the line quoted.

Identified.

The general postoffice at Paris once received a letter addressed "To Monsieur, My Son, Rue —," etc. They were going to send it to what in France corresponds to our dead letter office, but a clerk objected.

"There must be two fools in that family," he said. "We shall find out to whom it belongs."

Sure enough, in a few days a stupid looking youth entered and said to the clerk:

"I'd like to find out if you haven't kept here a letter for me from my father."

"Yes, sir," replied the clerk. "Here it is."

A Great Favor.

"So you are the noble youth who plunged into the raging flood and rescued my daughter from a dreadful death?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you have come to ask me for a great favor?"

"Yes, sir."

"You have come to ask me to let you marry my child?"

"No, sir. I've come to ask you to let me have $7 until next Saturday night."

One Attraction Missing.

"No, by thunder!" said the circus man. "We've only got a rhinoceros, but I'll cable over and buy one."

HOMINY AND SAEURKRAUT.

Properly Cooked, One Suggests Beethoven, the Other Wagner.

Why is it that sauerkraut is never truly fit to eat until it has been cooked twice, with an interregnum of twenty-four hours separating the cooking? And why is it that hominy boiled and then fried is at times as delicious as hominy simply boiled?

In each case every hearty and artistic eater is aware of the fact, but no one thinks to discover the reason. Among the ignorant, of course, sauerkraut is devoured at once and after its first stewing, but the present inquiry is not directed toward the habits of the ignorant. To the connoisseur of educated taste, to the refined amateur of delicatessen, sauerkraut cooked once is as unsavory a mess as Philadelphia peppercorn or Boston beans. The very thought of it benumbs his stomach and insults his intelligence. And yet if that same sauerkraut be laid away for twenty-four hours, preferably in a stone jar, with a brick on top, and be brought to a simmer in some suitable stewpan that same connoisseur will walk twenty miles in the snow to get a scent of it and a hundred miles on red-hot coals to get a few skeins of it.

In the Bavarian and Saxon royal families the sauerkraut for Sunday's breakfast is always cooked on Friday evening. An hour or two of brisk ebullition is enough. Then the beautiful strands are dredged up from the caldron and transferred to a large copper or earthen vessel, which is deposited overnight in some convenient arsenal. There the kraut remains all day Saturday and Saturday night. At dawn on Sunday morning it is withdrawn from its vault and transferred to an aluminum stewpan and seasoned. Then the mixture is heated, and the result is sauerkraut de luxe. Once cooked it would be mere food; twice cooked it is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

Hominy has the same habits. Boil it once and it is food for convicts and political hangers-on, but boil it twice or boil it and then fry it and it is lifted at once to the range of a superb and flawless victual. The man who has never tasted hominy in conjunction with the native wild hog is a man whose right to be regarded as entirely civilized and cultured is yet to be demonstrated. Such viands—and alas, they are too few!—ennoble while they warm and educate while they nourish. In the art of eating their place is as high as that of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony in the art of music.

Hominy, indeed, suggests Beethoven in more ways than one. It shows all of his rugged simplicity and honest worth. There is a directness about it which wins the heart. It is above all pretense and subterfuge. Sauerkraut, on the other hand, is more romantic. It is not Beethoven, but Wagner. No matter how well one knows it, it is full of delicious novelties and surprises.

AUNT ABBIE'S VISIT.

The Old Lady Managed to Make Things Pretty Lively.

Sawkins says that something always happens when his Aunt Abbie comes to visit. She is eighty-four, and, although she cannot hear and her eyesight is poor, still she is very active, particularly at night, when she frequently gets up to take a sip of milk and nibble a cracker.

The first night of her last visit she got up at two o'clock to take her second snack. Feeling around with a lighted match for the gas, she set the curtain on fire. Without a moment's hesitation she pulled the blazing curtain down and tried to beat the blaze out with her bed slipper. She couldn't, so she hurried

When "Work" Becomes "Labor"

There's Something Wrong,
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Will Right It.

Thousands of Women feel just like this.

Neglect of the daily movement of the bowels, so necessary to health, soon poisons the whole system from the impurities retained in the body. Headaches, indigestion, biliousness and lassitude follow, and often more serious female disorders are brought on or aggravated.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills not only regulate the bowels, but they stimulate kidneys and skin as well to throw off waste matter and purify the blood. The result is quickly apparent in the disappearance of the headaches and biliousness, and the return of health and vigor. Thousands of women all over the world owe their present good health to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Made by W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont., and sold by all dealers at 25¢ a box.

The fare taker went over to her. She handed him a quarter, and he gave her 15 cents change.

"What's this for—my change is a nickel short?" she inquired icily.

"Took out for your husband," replied the conductor.

She looked around. "What! That man told you to get his fare from me? Why, I never saw him before. He's an imposter."

Campion was game. And all that saved him from being put off the car was that he persuaded the conductor to accept three two-cent stamps.

Seven.

Numerous are the queer beliefs concerning the number seven. From the very earliest ages the seven great planets were known and ruled this world and the dwellers in it, and their number entered into every conceivable matter that concerned man. There are seven days in the week, "seven holes in the head, for the master stars are seven," seven ages both for man and the world in which he lives. There are seven material heavens. There are seven colors in the spectrum and seven notes in the diatonic octave, and the "leading" note of the scale is the seventh. Be it noted that the seventh son is not always gifted with beneficent powers. In Portugal he is believed to be subject to the powers of darkness and to be compelled every Saturday evening to assume the likeness of an ass.—St. James' Gazette.

Frozen Things.

To freeze a living thing means to most minds to kill it, yet all hardy plants can be frozen without being injured. So can many insects if they are not broken while in that brittle state. London Punch once suggested even that human beings could be frozen without harm and said that this would be a convenient way of disposing of children during a railway trip.

The French government mentioned Alexander A. Boddy in "To Kairwan the Holy." The commissioners were sent through Tunisia to ascertain the names of the rivers, mountains, ruins, and so forth.

On the completion of the map made by the officials it was found that a very large proportion of the places bore the same name—that of Ma'arifsh. It seemed strange and unnatural that so many mountains, rivers and ruins should be called alike. Yet the explorers solemnly assured the authorities that Berber, Zlass and other Arabs had been carefully questioned, and all gave like response.

The truth was that all the mountains, rivers and objects were labelled on the map with the interesting name in Arabic "Don't Know"—"River Don't Know," "Don't Know mountains," "Oued Ma'arifsh," "Djebel Ma'arifsh."

Shifting the Responsibility.

An Irishman who traded in small wares kept a donkey cart, with which he visited the different villages. On one occasion he came to a bridge where a toll was levied.

He found to his disappointment he had not enough money to pay it.

A bright thought struck him. He unharnessed the donkey and put it into the cart. Then, getting between the shafts himself, he pulled the cart with the donkey standing in it on to the bridge.

In due course he was hailed by the toll collector.

"Hey, man!" cried the latter.

"Whaur's your toll?"

"Begorra," said the Irishman, "just ask the droiver."

AN EARLY PORTIA.

She Pleaded Her Own Case In the High Court of Babylon.

Among the most interesting treasures of the British museum are the clay tablets of ancient Babylonia. These tablets, resembling unglazed tiles, throw quaint lights and shadows on the manners and customs of long ago. Usually the records are fragmentary, but are occasionally fairly complete, as is that of legal proceedings instituted by a "woman of Borsippa," which action is of particular interest as showing that a married woman's property law was in force as early as 550 B.C.

The proceedings to which the "documents" refer were taken by a woman against her brother-in-law to regain possession of property left by her husband. The evidence showed that a man of Babylon had married the woman from Borsippa, and with the money of her dowry he had bought an estate. After a few years, having no children of their own, they adopted a son, and shortly afterward the husband mortgaged the estate. Later he died, leaving the estate mortgaged, and his brother attempted to claim the property.

The widow took the matter before the court at Borsippa, but it was beyond the jurisdiction of this court and was referred to the high court at Babylon. Here the case was duly heard, and the judges rendered a decision to the effect that as the property had been the husband's the widow could have it upon paying off the mortgage and that the brother had no claim. Eventually the estate would be the property of the adopted son. It is expressly stated, as though a matter of some interest, that the woman pleaded her own case in the high court of Babylon without assistance.

hesitation she pulled the blazing curtain down and tried to beat three blaze out with her bed slipper. She couldn't, so she hurried downstairs in the dark to Sawkins' room and pounded on the door.

Sawkins and his wife awoke with a start and heard some one mumbling outside the door. Aunt Abbie had put her teeth away for the night, and her voice sounded strange.

They sprang out of bed and yanked open the door.

"Fire!" muttered Aunt Abbie in deep guttural tones. And she pointed upstairs.

Up to the third floor front darted Sawkins, followed by his wife and Aunt Abbie. The carpet and a wicker chair holding Aunt Abbie's undergarments were burning briskly. Sawkins grabbed rugs and tried to smother the blaze, while his wife ran to the fourth floor to arouse the servants.

The servants came rushing down in bare feet and nightgowns. Sawkins meanwhile attended strictly to business. With water carried from the bathroom the fire was extinguished.

During the excitement Sawkins had forgotten all about his father, but as the old man had not showed up Sawkins thought his father was still asleep downstairs.

It seems not. His father had heard Aunt Abbie say "Fire!" and very thoughtfully for an old man of seventy-nine, had opened his window and yelled "Fire!" Then he had gone out on the front steps in his nightshirt and yelled until some one heard him and sent in an alarm.

When the firemen came one of them took Sawkins' father, as he was, into the next house. So when Sawkins ran downstairs to tell his father about the fire he met the firemen coming up. They told him the old man was in next door. So soon as the firemen had gone Sawkins went in next door after his father.

Mr. Sawkins, Sr., was sitting in the parlor, surrounded by the neighbor's family, and busily employed in consuming a hot drink. His costume was a night-shirt covered by a swallowtail coat, patent leather pumps and knees draped in a steamer rug.

Sawkins was so struck by his father's genteel appearance that he gravely thanked the neighbors for their kindness in outfitting his father. Then he took his father home in his novel costume to show his wife.

The next morning Aunt Abbie said she was too old to go visiting and wanted to go home. But she couldn't—her underclothing was all burned.

A SENSE OF HUMOR.

This Man's Better Half Had It In an Aggravated Form.

There's nothing in that old saying about women not having any sense of humor.

Here's a case that happened:

The Campions, Mr. and Mrs. boarded the Euclid car to make the homeward journey.

Campion had just discovered that he was entirely without funds except a check tucked away in his pocketbook—not even a dime for car fare.

"I've spoken to you several times about such carelessness," observed Mrs. Campion in a vexed tone. "If I didn't happen to have 20 or 30 cents in my purse we'd have to walk home, for it's too late for you to get that check cashed. You ought to make sure that you have change in your pocket before you get on the street car."

"Oh, well, so long as you've got car fare let's don't worry about what might happen," put in Campion irritably. "I've never been put off a street car yet."

The car was so nearly filled, that they couldn't get seats together, but sat down on opposite sides of the aisle, still glaring at each other.

"My wife'll hand it to you," says Campion, nodding in the direction of his helpmeet.

series formed by the decomposition of animal matter, as in Ohio and Indiana gas, and from vegetable matter, as in Pennsylvania gas, this decay having occurred within the rocks and probably at moderate temperatures. When once formed it accumulates in the pores of the rocks in which it originated or in the overlying layers, but is usually kept from escaping to the surface by the presence of some layers of impervious rock. It is then obtained by the piercing of these strata by wells, or where the beds have been fissured by folding or faulting it may issue from natural channels.—New York American.

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she could not live. The Tablets cured her.—Mrs. E. R. McBRIDE, Napanee, Ont.

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—Mrs. JAMES RIDDELL, Barrydale, Ont.

Hear it yourself - the Edison Phonograph

You cannot judge the Edison by hearing other kinds. The Edison is the sound-reproducing machine at its best. It is not a talking machine. It is a Phonograph reproducing every sound faithfully—the song exactly the way the singer sang it; the opera exactly the way the orchestra played it; the two-step exactly the way the band rendered it.

That is the Edison Phonograph as Mr. Edison makes it—the object of his constant, daily care.

When he says he wants to see an Edison Phonograph in every home, he means your home. Do you not want one there? Do you not need this amusement maker for your own sake, for your children and for your guests? Hear one today. Hear all the others too and compare. Only in this way can you know that what we say is true.

THE TINWARE TUMBLED.

Then the Prices Tumbled, and Dan Sold Out All His Stock.

Dan MacQuinn, who runs a general merchandise store in a country town, conducts more bargain and special sales than all the other merchants put together. And the seemingly strange part of it is that he makes a big success out of every sale.

Recently he conducted a tinware sale. All kinds of tinware household utensils were displayed on tables and shelves about the storeroom. Directly in the center of the room was an immense standing case with eight or ten shelves, on which was arranged a wide variety of pieces of tinware all marked in bold figures.

About the time the store was packed with bargain seekers there came a terrific crash from the center of the room. A lumbering expressman had tipped over the case, and the tinware was scattered everywhere, but not damaged to any extent. Dan immediately rushed to the scene of the confusion. So did all the women attending the sale. After giving the drayman a severe calling down Dan, who appeared to be in a terrible rage, announced that rather than pick up one piece of the ware he would sell every piece for 6 cents. The original prices, marked plainly on each piece, were from 10 to 15 cents. Dan sold every piece right from the floor and did it in less than five minutes.

If any one of the bargain seekers had happened around the store after the sale was over they would have been surprised to see Dan handing the expressman a piece of money, apparently very well satisfied with the result of a clever ruse which had brought a big day's receipts.—Modern Methods.

A DUTCH PAWNSHOP.

Sunday Clothes a Favorite Collateral in Holland.

The Dutch pawnshop of Amsterdam, known as Bank van Leening, is under the control of the municipality. Up to 1616 the business was leased by the city to a private company, but as it refused to reduce its interest on pawned articles the city took over the business and has managed it ever since. The first shop was established in the Engle Lombardsteeg, and business is still done in the original building. As the business increased branch houses were opened, and there are now fifteen such branches throughout the city.

Each article pawned costs about 6 cents for administration, and about $25,000 per annum is lost on articles pawned which do not pay more than 4 per cent interest.

It appears to be the custom of some people in Holland to pawn their best clothes on Monday morning, redeem them on the Saturday night following and repawn them on the following Monday, securing their use for the Sunday outing. Over 40 per cent of the business of the pawnshop consists of this class of pledges.

The revenue is derived from interest on pledges, to 10 cents charged on each loan for administering expenses, amounts received from the sale of pledges and rent of parts of the building owned by the pawnshop.

The minimum advanced on any article is 16 cents and the maximum $201. The interest paid runs from 6 per cent to 13 per cent. The amount of interest collected is regulated every three years, so that the bank will not receive at any time more than 3 per cent on the capital invested.—Consular Reports

His cure seems a wonderful thing to his family and all his friends.

Mr. Henry Speers, the well-known J.P. of Moorefield, Ont., suffered for two years with Chronic Indigestion and Dyspepsia, which brought on a serious Heart Trouble. He wasted away until he was nothing more than a skeleton. Two physicians gave him up to die.

The Act by Which One Controversy Was Decided.

Three men were disputing in Berlin one day as to which of them had the best memory, and finally they asked a well known writer to decide the matter.

"Read me any page of Goethe's prose works," said one of the three, "and I will at once repeat it word for word."

"I can do better than that," said the second one. "Put me in a corner of this room, and I will play three games of chess simultaneously without ever looking at the boards."

"That's nothing to what I can do," said the first speaker again. "Begin a conversation with me now about the most absurd things possible, and at the end of an hour I will repeat the entire conversation to you."

The third man was silent, and the referee said to him: "Why don't you tell us what you can do? A few minutes ago you were boasting a good deal of your wonderful memory."

"I know it," was the reply. "But I did not then know that my two friends took the matter so seriously. And as they are so much in earnest I will not try to surpass them, for I cannot forget that each of them did me a favor yesterday."

"Yesterday?" asked the referee.

"Yes," was the reply. "And you have not yet forgotten it? In that case the laurels belong to you, for you have indeed a wonderful memory."

The Arabs of Syria.

Among the Arabs of Syria a man changes his name after the birth of his eldest son, assuming the name which has been bestowed upon the heir, with the prefix Abu, meaning "father of." Thus, if the son is called Fudle Allah, "God's bounty," the father will be henceforth known as Abu Fudle Allah, "father of God's bounty." In like manner the mother would become known as Em Fudle Allah, "mother of God's bounty." This custom is not merely one of common speech, but extends to all occasions and even to legal documents. Still more strangely, even when a man though married has no son the courtesy of oriental society demands that he should be addressed as Abu Salim or Abu Mahmoud, after an imaginary son whom politeness confers upon him.

Disease of The Kidneys Brought on By Catarrh.

Pe-ru-na Made a Well Man of Me.
I Cannot Speak Too Highly of It.

Mr. George King, 458 St. Denis St., Montreal, Canada, a well-known business man of that city, writes:

"Peruna cured me from what the doctors were afraid would turn into Bright's disease, and after you have gone through the suffering that I have with catarrh of the bladder and kidney trouble, and have been cured you are pretty apt to remember the medicine that did the work."

"Peruna is a blessing to a sick man. Eight bottles made me well and were worth more than a thousand dollars to me. I cannot speak too highly of it. It is now four years since I was troubled, and I have enjoyed perfect health since. Every spring and fall I take a bottle of it and it keeps me well."

MR. GEORGE KING

CATARRH of the kidneys is a very much neglected disease.

It is not until the disease has a firm hold upon the kidneys that the patient begins to realize that there is some derangement of these organs.

The slight backaches, the feelings of lassitude, and other warning symptoms of kidney disease are overlooked.

They are not serious enough to detain the patient from his regular work.

Even when he discovers that the kidneys are affected, he does not recognize the difficulty as being caused by catarrh. Catarrh is sometimes so very gradual in its approach and its earlier symptoms cause such slight discomfort that it is not noticed.

However, when it is once firmly seated in the kidneys it becomes a difficult disease to exterminate.

Indeed, catarrh of the kidneys is more serious than catarrh affecting some of the other organs of the body.

In the kidneys it is liable to terminate in Bright's disease or diabetes, both of which are recognized as very serious ailments, if not fatal.

The thing to be done, when catarrh of the kidneys is discovered, is to take some internal systemic catarrh remedy, one that reaches the very source of the catarrh and removes the cause of the difficulty.

Such a remedy has been found in Peruna. It reaches catarrh, no matter where it may be located in the body—whether in the more exposed membranes of the nose and throat, or whether in the remotest part of the kidneys.

That Peruna is at once the safest and most reliable remedy for catarrh of the kidneys is proven by the many testimonials written by those who have experienced its benefits.

The testimonials given here are only specimens of the many testimonials on our records, pertaining to the relief afforded by Peruna in severe cases of kidney trouble.

I soon found I was getting better and continued taking it for four months. It cleaned out the system, leaving me well and strong and feeling better than I have in years."

THE EVIL EYE.

To Praise a Turkish Baby is to Terrify Its Mother.

Turkish women even the most enlightened of them are very superstitious. To praise a baby to its mother is all your life is worth should the baby happen to fall ill afterward.

The evil eye is the most common belief, and little children, who may be dressed in the height of European fashion otherwise, will wear under the brim of their hats a piece of garlic or other potent charm against the evil eye. Nigmy Hanoum, a woman not only well educated, but possessed of an unusual mind, had four children. They were faultlessly dressed in imported English clothes, but each of them wore some trinket against the evil eye. I teased her about it, and she protested that it was not her doing. "The slaves put them on, and I might say, 'I don't know what I didn't respond to the government's call for more goods, would you not, Stewart?'

Stewart, however, had the laws of the land in his thought of the pig and the farmer had thought of him. It didn't particularly trouble Stewart, but thought didn't.

But it troubled the farmer. Stitches of his red head by times to his satisfaction. He would surely tell Palmer that he was sorry, but that he didn't feel that he could see such a big bull on credit, and as he knew that Palmer couldn't raise the cash immediately, why, that would end it, and the sale would be off. Well, young Palmer called early and Stewart greeted him in a very polite manner, telling him how sorry he was, etc., but really not that thick a wise business to extend credit for such an amount.

Tp. Clerk.

HOW FARMERS CAN PRACTICE CONSERVATION.

Canada, being a nation of farmers, has to pay a very large seed bill each year. Last year our crops called for 33,000,000 bushels of seed grain—wheat, oats, and barley, and we are constantly increasing our agricultural acreage. This being so, the economy of sowing good clean seed is at once apparent. The advantages to be derived from it are like the proceeds of a sum of money laid out at compound interest—they are cumulative in their effect and grow in ever increasing ratio. Some years ago a competition was carried on in some 450 places in Canada to see just what the actual results of using clean pured seed would be. If we reason from the results obtained from it, we find that our grain yield last year would have been increased by 190,000,000 bushels had clean vigorous seed been sowed on every acre under cultivation. Now, 190,000,000 bushels of grain would fill 1,500 miles of railway grain cars. It is such a large amount it is hard for the mind to comprehend, but, at any rate, it goes to show that it would pay our farmers to be particular about the kind of seed they sow.

REALIZING WHAT'S WHAT.

The United States are waking up to the fact that Canada is fully competent to conserve her natural resources for the use of her own people. Time was when popular opinion in the United States tended to regard Jack Canuck as a hewer of wood and a drawer of water for Uncle Sam. But certain expressions of opinion of a contrary sort that are now continually cropping up in the American press show that this attitude towards Canada is fast giving way. Here is sample from the editorial columns of the American Forestry Journal:

"Canada is measuring her timber resources and preparing to protect them by progressive and drastic measures against exploitation for the benefit of wasteful foreign countries, including her next door neighbor. We cannot look to the north for our salvation. We must husband all our remaining resources and plant trees wherever they can be grown more profitably than other crops, in order that our own future may be assured. This is monopoly privileges have ever been noted for their strict adherence to the law of monopoly price, i. e. exacting as high a price as is compatible with the greatest possible profit. With them the interests of the consuming public are but incidental to corporation profits.

But there are other more serious objections to the scheme. These have been concisely set forth by the Commission of Conservation in a report on the project made last February before the International Waterways Commission—the tribunal that is to report upon the advisability of the proposed dam. The report of the Commission Conservation stated that Canadian interests are given a minimum consideration in the company's plans. Of the total proposed development only a small portion (one sixth) would be developed on the Canadian side of the river. The Canadian market, it states, cannot at present absorb its half of the proposed development and, should power be exported to the United States, the vested interests it would create there would prevent its subsequent withdrawal to meet the future needs of Canadian industry. Moreover, the company proposes a new channel for navigation on the American side of the river, the approach to which would be beset with dangerous currents. Thus, if permission were given to build the dam, not only would it be exceedingly difficult for Canada to proceed with the deepening of the navigable channel of the St. Lawrence, but an all-Canadian route from Lake Superior to the ocean would become a dream of the past.

SEVENTY POUNDS OF MILK PER DAY.

In this busy age when Canada is making a name for herself with big things, waterpowers, timber limits, railroads, real estate and so on, it is perhaps as well to remind ourselves that the ordinary farm operations occasionally show very big things. We hear now and then of poor cows and low yields of milk, so we need constantly to bear in mind that huge things are accomplished by the proper combination of the brainy dairyman, good feed and the selected cow. We have plenty of good cows in Canada.

wasteful foreign countries, including her next door neighbor. We cannot look to the north for our salvation. We must husband all our remaining resources and plant trees wherever they can be grown more profitably than other crops, in order that our own future may be assured. This is the only way. Canada has not the resources for her own needs and ours too and she is sufficiently wide awake and intelligent to guard her own. The only way that our timber resources and Canada's can be made inexhaustible is by the application of the highest scientific knowledge and the broadest common sense.

DAMMING THE ST. LAWRENCE.

A group of American capitalists are asking the Canadian and the United governments for a very valuable privilege on the St. Lawrence river. They want the right to generate approximately 600,000 h. p. of electric energy by damming that river at the Long Sault Rapids near Cornwall. It is a somewhat difficult matter to realize at once just what that means; but when we are told that it would take pretty nearly one half of the yearly output of all the coal mines in Canada to produce the same amount of 24 horse power, it can readily be seen how valuable such a privilege would be—to the capitalists at least. To Eastern Ontario, corporation control of that enormous energy might not be so advantageous. Large corporations with casually show very big things. We hear now and then of poor cows and low yields of milk, so we need constantly to bear in mind that huge things are accomplished by the proper combination of the brainy dairyman, good feed and the selected cow. We have plenty of good cows in Canada, some that give 10,000 15,000 and 20,000 pounds milk in a year. One or two big records were made in March by excellent cows, one lot of six in one herd giving a total yield of 9,388 pounds milk, and some giving as much as seventy pounds of milk in one day; think of it, enough to supply the needs of 56 ordinary people at the rate of one pint each. Such cows are not picked up every day, they are not average cows, but they are an indication of what is being accomplished by brain work, applied intelligence in dairying. We need to realize that it is perfectly feasible to do a good deal more raising not only the much needed raising of the general standard of the average cow so that the 3,000 pounder is no longer "in our midst", but the raising of a good many more cows of at least the 10,000 lb. type. Dairy records, of milk produced and feed consumed, will soon show which cow in the stable of the average dairyman is not worth keeping, and which will respond to more liberal feeding so as to produce milk in abundance. Cow testing associations will help every dairyman to success: join the nearest to you or assist in forming a new one.

I teased her about it, and she protested that it was not her doing. "The slaves put them on, and I do not wish to hurt their feelings by taking them off," she said.

I resolved to test her enlightenment, and the next time I saw the baby with her I exclaimed, "What a lovely little creature!"

"You wretch!" she cried. "Spit on that child at once!"

I laughed at her manifest terror, but hastened to add, "I do not think her lovely in the least, for she has red hair and freckles and a pug nose, but I wanted to find out whether it was you or the slaves who put that garlic on your babies."

She shrugged her shoulders. "The slaves did it, but I suppose I do in the bottom of my heart believe in the evil eye. It is in the blood."—Mrs. Kenneth Brown in Metropolitan Magazine.

HE GOT THE GOODS.

Business Deal Between Potter Palmer and A. T. Stewart.

At the time of the civil war Potter Palmer was in the dry goods business in Chicago, and Levi Z. Leiter and Marshall Field were working for him. Palmer wasn't so well known, but he had a good reputation in the trade, and he didn't have to introduce himself when he called on old A. T. Stewart to buy some goods. After some dickering they agreed upon the price, and Palmer calmly said that he would take about $100,000 worth. It was a little larger bill than Stewart exactly cared to sell young Palmer on credit, but he concluded to make the deal and told him to come in the next morning and arrange some final details. That why, that would end it, and the sale would be off. Well, young Palmer called early, and Stewart greeted him in his very abrupt manner, telling him how sorry he was, etc., but really he didn't think it wise business to extend credit for such an amount.

"Just how much does the bill come to?" said young Palmer, seemingly sorrowful-like.

"Just $100,000," Stewart replied, and then he straightway gulped for breath as young Palmer drew an immense pocketbook from his inside vest pocket and opening it, counted out 110 thousand dollar bills and, laying them quietly on Stewart's desk, said: "If you will kindly count them and give me a receipt I'll be obliged, as I must take the next train home. Ship the goods soon as you can, and when you're out our way drop in. Always glad to see our friends."

THE SPIRIT OF RELIGION

Present Age Is Vastly More Religious Than We Usually are Willing to Admit

"The letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life."—II. Cor. iii. 6.

Some think that we are suffering from religious panic to-day, a rapidly spreading feeling that the old reserves are empty and the old foundations are gone. The simple confidence with which the teachers of religion were once believed has passed away and they have lost the sense of absolute certainty that once was theirs with regard to the facts of their faith.

This age of science thinks about all things in a manner so different from that of preceding ages that amongst those who think at all some things have been entirely thought out of existence. Does this mean that for the modern mind and for the life of our day no faith remains that will have for us values equivalent to the faith of our fathers?

Any religion that is really vital will express itself in the terms of its own age. The trouble with much of our present religious teaching is that it fears to use any other terms than those of the past. The religion for to-day will be that which grows out of the deep needs of this day and which finds its most natural expression in the life of this day.

ITS SPIRIT IS ETERNAL.

and therefore its manifestation will be that which is normal to every age.

The man who poses as the champion and exclusive expositor of piety accuses the age of irreligion because it has become impatient with his pretenses and his quibbles; the age itself is unconscious of its real religious character because it hides the manifestations of its piety under other names.

Because so generally it has been abused by those who profess to its friends the word religion has come often into bad odor. But the ideals, the principles, the conceptions of human relations and duties for which it stands abide, grow in their power over our minds and come to be the ruling ideas of our age.

There was a time when in the name of religion a hundred dead bodies might lie in the street, evidence of the ferocity of the conflict between opposing schools of theological opinion. To-day you could not hold a crowd together on a street corner or find an obscure place in a popular periodical for the discussion of such questions. They have value and living significance alone to the lesser minds that think only as far as the forms of truth.

But the spirit of religion, escaping from the confining armor which its friends once in love wrought for its defense (armor that would have crushed the very life out); that spirit works its way through all human society and continues under other names to dominate our deeds. The forms of truth may be dead; the truth lives, and men in every age fashion for it new forms.

While you cannot excite a crowd on controversies of theology, you can quicken a wonderful enthusiasm whenever you touch men on such subjects as human justice, social rights, on love for neighbor, on care and duty to the needy. We have a deeper interest in the

than any age before, accompanied by indifference as to its forms.

The spirit of religion cannot be confined to institutions especially organized for its promotion. The church may be the prophet of religion to this age if she will see her opportunity aright, but she cannot be the sole agency for its execution. Religion is made manifest, writes its doctrines, and inscribes its creed in the hospitals, the relief societies, the movement for social righteousness and the modern swift answer to every appeal of human need.

If religion is essentially the answer of the spirit of man to the consciousness of higher and larger possibilities, every attempt he makes to realize those possibilities is essentially religious; everything that enriches the life of all, that lifts up the eyes, enlarges the heart, and inspires and aids life to its ideal perfection is in truth religious.

Once catch this conception and every life is transformed; all living may become truly sacred and every duty divine. The walls of the church fade and worship sends its glory along the street and into all the ways of men. Men do the will of the Most High when they in any way seek for themselves and their fellows freedom from whatever restrains and blights life and entrance into all that increases and enlarges it.

The worst thing that can happen is the confining of our religion to formal acts of piety; the best thing is the inspiring of all our acts with the idealism, hope, and faith of true religion. It is food to feel that we can, and, indeed, we must, forget the ancient quibbles over words and forms and express our faith and our worship in the terms of our own life and day.

ASSISTED BY BARKER

H.M.S. Colossal, with its grey-painted hull snuggling against the stone quay at Portsmouth dockyard, was engaged in the best of all naval manoeuvres—namely, "paying off."

In long, orderly lines, the streams of bluejackets swung down the white gangways, each with a bulging kit-bag under his arm, and each with an air of calm, holy joy, which spoke of full pockets, and long leave to empty them in. A. B. Marlowe, slipping down the narrow gangway in front of his watch-mate Barker, turned round and grinned.

"Bet you she's waiting for me outside, matey!" he said.

"No bloomin' fear!" Barker replied. "I don't want to chuck my money away!"

They joined the party mustered along the quay for the final roll-call, and halted, laying down their kit-bags for a moment.

"Haven't seen her for eight months," Marlowe continued. "Wouldn't be surprised if I didn't recognize her."

"Rats to that!" Barker put in. "How many watches have you spent describing her to me, you old jaw-pot? Hundreds, I should think! You're a walking photograph of this Nell of yours! I don't mind betting as I will recognize her, and I've never seen her before!"

"I'll bet you a bob you don't!" said his chum, hoping fervently that he would have to pay over the shilling.

"Right you are!" said Barker easily. "I suppose she will be here all right!"

"I took good care of that!" his chum replied. "Sent her a telegram by the packet last night. You can bet your life she'll be outside waiting for her man!"

With bachelor superiority, Barker began to air his views.

"I dessay yourn is different from the rest of 'em," he said; "but there are some what 'ud rather have their 'sband's room to 's company, you know."

But Marlowe, remembering his chum's quaint views of womankind in general, only smiled.

"I've heard you before, old horse," he said easily; "you're wot they call a 'missyognist'—and a real 'ot one at that!"

He jerked his thumb towards the big gates.

"She'll be there," he said—"and in the front row, too, next to the orchestra! Ha, ha!" And he laughed at his little joke.

Ten minutes later the big gates opened, and the crew filed out into the white roadway.

From every side there came little cries as wife or sweetheart, or mother, saw and greeted some bronzed lad.

Marlowe had pressed ahead a little, and when Barker passed through the gate he found his chum looking around him blankly.

"Blow the luck!" Barker whispered under his breath. "I knew I would win that rotten bet! I always do!"

He hesitated for a second before touching his chum on the arm.

ed "Don't let's row out here. Are you coming our way, Miss Craven?"

Miss Craven shook her head. "No fear!" she said. "I wouldn't mind, perhaps, if you were by yourself. Mr. Barker, but I ain't going to be seen in the High Street with him. I'm not going to be laughed at!"

Marlowe smothered an oath, and, spinning round on his heel, walked blindly away, with Barker by his side.

The woman Liz Craven had been his sweetheart once—before he met Nell. He had not played an altogether manly part in that affair. He had been young and foolish, and had fallen in love with a pair of black eyes, without studying what manner of being looked out at him through them. A quarrel had ended the matter, as far as he was concerned; but it was evident that Liz had not quite forgiven him.

"It's a lie, Barker—a rotten lie!" he cried. "But it 'urts, just the same!"

"I suppose it does," said Barker.

"It 'urts more because she ain't turned up," continued the sailor gloomily. "It—it makes it sound as though it was true. She knew I was landing to-day. Why didn't she come to meet me?"

Barker, in his position as guide and comforter, did his best to find a plausible answer, but failed.

"No. 44, Vincent Street won't see me to-day!" cried Marlowe, with a hard laugh. "I'm going to the Sailors' Home, I am. That's where all we poor 'omeless birds are sure of a welcome."

"You ain't goin' to see Nell?"

"No! She didn't think it worth 'er while to come and meet me; I'm hanged if I'm goin' to put myself out to meet 'er. I might drop in carelessly some day this week; but blow me if I go there this day!"

Barker's cheery face wrinkled up into a mask of woe.

"The—the Sailors' Home isn't the real thing, you know, Bob," he murmured. "You won't be 'alf so comfortable."

"I know that," said the dogged husband; "but she'll be as miserable as I am."

Then a quick inspiration came to Barker.

"What was the number?" he thought. "No. 44, Viscount—no, Vi-Vi-Vincent Street. Got it!" He shot a side glance at his chum. "I'll do you yet, you hobnobbin' old ass!" he finished.

And so, when the two sailors stalked into the wide hall of the Home, and booked two beds for the night, Barker, after leaving his kit with the porter, suddenly disappeared.

"He said he would be back in a minit," said the porter. "Told me to tell you he wouldn't be long."

Barker's idea of a "minit" would not have suited many workers. As a matter of fact, it was well on in the afternoon before he returned to the Sailors' Home. Marlowe, strolling vaguely around the tables of the reading-room, scowled at his chum as he entered.

"You 'ave been quick!" he said, with withering sarcasm. "What made you 'urry back?"

But Barker was too full of electrifying news to take note of the other man's bad humor.

"Bob, Bob!" he whispered hoarsely. "Get your kit-bag! You've got to go home at once!"

"Not me!"

Lesson VII. Growing Hatred to Jesus, Matt. 12. 22-32, 38-42.

MAY 15.

Lesson VII. Growing Hatred to Jesus, Matt. 12: 22-32, 38-42.

Golden Text, Matt. 12: 30.

Verse 23. The multitudes were amazed—Well they might be, for they had witnessed a threefold miracle—a poor unfortunate given mental illumination, speech, and sight.

The son of David—A popular title for the Messiah, reflecting the teaching of the rabbis, that the son of David would not come until Rome's rule was world wide. During the lifetime of Jesus no questions as to the Davidic descent of his family were raised even by his enemies. Jude, the Lord's brother after the flesh, had descendants who incurred the jealous hatred of Domitian, the emperor, for the very reason that they sprang from David.

24. By Beelzebub—See Word Studies for April 3. No better testimony to the genuineness of the miracle could exist than this specious and senseless fling of the Pharisees. Since the wonder had actually taken place, it must be circumvented somehow and the enthusiasm of the people checked. So this foolish charge is made that Jesus is in league with the prince of demons.

25. Every kingdom divided—The first move of Jesus was to expose the flimsiness of the accusation. It was notorious that a kingdom, or a city, or a house which was rent by disunion, was in a bad way. The logic of that was, that Satan's kingdom had no chance to stand, that Satan was working against his own interest (verse 26.)

27. By whom do your sons cast them out? Jesus thus turns the charge back upon the Pharisees themselves. Exorcism, or the casting out of demons by means of magic formula, and incantations, was practised by some rabbis and their disciples. Let them be the judges whether such notable miracles ought to be assigned to Satan, when their miserable works of magic are attributed to a higher power.

28. The final thrust of Jesus is the inevitable one. If it is child's play to think that such remarkable deeds as those done by Jesus could possibly emanate from Satan, then the Spirit of God must be their source. That being so, the kingdom of God was with them, which was the same as saying he was the Messiah.

29. First bird the strong man—It was not by being in league with the devil that Jesus was able to enter his realm and spoil his schemes for the destruction of men. He had gained the mastery over Satan in the wilderness, and this lesser work of casting out inferior demons was easy. It is only the man who, in the name of Jesus, has conquered the forces of evil within himself that can go forth, in the same name, to cast the demons out of others.

30. He that is not with me—Referring to the Pharisees. Since they had withheld their sympathy from him in his contest against the power of evil, they were simply adding strength to the other side—they were the ogres in league with Beelzebub.

final way with men. Those, therefore, who are not gathering the sheaves of the spiritual harvest in his way, and under his direction, are undoing the work of the centuries (scattereth).

31-32. Blasphemy against the Spirit shall not be forgiven—Because it betrays a hardness of heart which is past all repentance. The Pharisees could be forgiven for speaking against the Son of man, because it was conceivable they did it in ignorance, the humble life of Jesus not being in keeping with their Messianic expectations. But when, in face of their certain knowledge that the miracle they had witnessed was due only to the benign influence of the Spirit of God, they had charged the performer of the miracle with being demon-possessed, maliciously calling good evil, their case was hopeless. In no world, present or future, could such men be forgiven, since their egregious prejudices hemmed them in from all influences of the Spirit and made impossible any true penitence.

33. We would see a sign—The deep seated depravity of the Pharisees is seen in nothing better than this. They had been completely routed in their vicious attempt to fasten upon Jesus the charge of being in alliance with Satan. Still they persist in asking for a work of wonder in proof of his Messiahship. It was contemptible impudence, and evoked the stinging and well-deserved phrase, evil and adulterous generation (39)—people who, in Old Testament language, had forsaken the true God and defiled themselves by illicit relations with the world. Although Jesus did perform miracles to accredit his mission (John 11: 4 and 12), he never acceded to any such impious request as this for a mere unmoral, ostentatious display of power.

39-41. The sign of Jonah—Really two miracles, the repentance of the Ninevites apart from any working of wonders, and the deliverance of the prophet from the belly of the whale. If the Pharisees would not repent and believe because of his preaching, he would grant no other sign, except the future wonder of his own resurrection.

Three nights—This is a historic difficulty, as the body of Jesus lay only two nights in the grave. In the language of Jesus, the Aramaic, it could be said that he was in the heart of the earth (Hades, the abode of disembodied spirits) three nights, an onah being day and a night, so that a part would be counted as a whole. Our translation is not accurate, but as near as we can come to accuracy.

42. The condemnation of the Pharisees is further emphasized by a comparison between the eagerness with which the queen of Sheba sought to hear the wisdom of Solomon and the stupidity with which they listened to the wisdom of One greater than Solomon.

"Don't get down in the mouth, old man," said the Optimist. "Look on the bright side of things." "That's all very well," mournfully replied the sufferer; "but what is the bright side of a gumboil?"

Lots of men enjoy getting the short end of it so they will have something to kick about.

looking around him blankly. "Blow the luck!" Barker whispered under his breath. "I knew I would win that rotten bet! I always do!"

He hesitated for a second before touching his chum on the arm.

"She—she ain't turned up yet, matey?"

Marlowe shook his head. "Can't make it out?" he murmured, half to himself.

Suddenly, he heard his name called out, and recognized the voice. He turned and shot a hostile glance at the woman who had come up to his side. Barker saw that she was no stranger to his chum, and, despite the handsome lines of her figure, and the light in her brilliant dark eyes, he did not like her.

"Well, Bob?" the woman said, holding out her hand. "Haven't you got a shake for an old friend?"

Marlowe held out his rough fist. "How are you, Liz?" he said.

The unenthusiastic way he said the words made the bright eyes take on a darker light.

"Doesn't make much of a fuss, does he?" Liz cried, looking at Barker. "But he wasn't always like this, you know."

She turned to Bob.

"Introduce me to your friend?" she demanded.

"Miss Craven—Mr. Barker," Bob mumbled.

Barker shook hands with the girl.

"I haven't seen you in old Pompey before, Mr. Barker," said Liz.

"That ain't my fault," the tar replied. "I've been 'ere, off an' on, for the last six years."

"Well, I never! Fancy that, now! And yet we never met!"

"That's my misfortune," the gallant Barker replied, attracted in spite of himself.

"Now, Bob here is an old pal of mine—a very old pal indeed. Isn't that so, Bob?"

Marlowe turned a hot face to the girl.

"Yes," he replied. "By the way, Liz, you've haven't seen Nell about her this morning?"

Neither Marlowe nor his chum was watching the woman at the time, or the hot, angry flush which darkened her cheek would have been seen.

"Not about here," Liz replied slowly; "but I did see her this morning."

The sailor turned on her like a flash.

"Where?" he asked.

Liz smiled—a slow, bitter smile. "That's telling," she said. "But she was very interested—talking nineteen to the dozen, in fact. Still, I don't blame her. He was a very smart fellow."

Marlowe's honest face went as white as death. He reached out and gripped the girl by the arm.

"What do you mean?" he gasped. "My Nell with another man? It's a lie! D'you 'ear? A mean, spiteful lie!"

Liz shook off his hand and sprang to one side. Her eyes were blazing with hate and triumph.

"Ha, ha, ha!" she laughed. "A lie, is it? All right, my fine fellow! Then why isn't she here to meet you? Answer me that, will you?"

She had raised her voice in her anger, and the shrill, piercing tones made the groups around the gate turn and stare across at the trio. Barker nudged Bob.

"Come on, matey!" he whispered.

made you sorry back!"

But Barker was too full of electricity news to take note of the other man's bad humor.

"Bob, Bob!" he whispered hoarsely. "Get your kit-bag! You've got to go home at once!"

"Not me!"

Barker clenched his huge fists.

"If you don't get out of 'ere in two bloomin' minits, I'll hammer your fat head off!" he cried.

Marlowe stepped back and eyed his chum. Barker, runner-up in the middle-weight boxing championship of the Mediterranean Fleet, was no light matter to tackle.

"What's the matter with you?" Bob gasped.

His chum, gripping his arm, whispered a few swift words in his ear. Marlowe staggered back against a table, his face as white as a sheet.

"Great heavens!" he breathed.

The next moment he had recovered himself, and, pulling his round cap tightly over his head, rushed across the room and down the broad staircase like a madman, with Barker at his heels.

A group of chattering women, standing outside the little house in Vincent Street, heard the sharp beat of hurried feet, and looking up, saw two stout sailors tearing down the pavement towards them.

"That's him!" one of them cried, pointing to Marlowe. "A nice sort of husband—I don't think!"

Marlowe reached the door, and rapped on it loudly.

"It's a wonder she ain't dead, poor dear! Think shame on yourself for not getting here sooner!" a shrill voice shouted to him.

A broad-faced woman opened the door to him.

Without a word, he pushed past her, and tore up the stairs three at a time. As his hand closed on the knob of the bed-room door the voice of his wife—and the faintness of it made his heart turn to water within him—cried:

"That you, Bob, darling!"

He swung the door back and darted into the room. The pale-faced girl stretched out her arms towards him.

"Oh, Bob—Bob!" she cried.

He flung his great arms around her frail body, and buried his head on her breast.

"Poor old Nell!" he murmured.

"What a howling blackguard I am, 'to be sure!'"

Nell released herself with a sigh of perfect contentment. Then, with a wonderfully gentle movement, she withdrew the coverlet. A tiny pink heap lay in the hollow of her rounded arm.

"Kiss your son, Bob!" she whispered. "He's—he's such a naughty little fellow! He wouldn't let his mother go to meet his dad!"—

WORTH KEEPING.

"Hurry up, Tommy!" called mother from downstairs. "We're late now. Have you got your shoes on?" "Yes, ma—all but one."

"What do you want?" asked the lady of the house of the tramp.

"Something to eat."

"I haven't anything in the house except some bread and tinned beef. Do you want some of that?"

"No," he said sadly. "I'd better move on. It would be a pity to waste such a fine appetite on such poor victuals."

HOME.

GOOD TOOLS FOR HOUSEWORK

It is not strange that a woman often does poor and unprofitable work when one considers the chronic condition of her tools; there seems to be inherent in her a preference for dull knives and scissors, heavy iron teakettles and skillets, for stubby, worn-out brooms and dusting brushes, for gummy sewing machines and clogged carpet sweepers.

Why is it that the average housekeeper will put off till to-morrow what she would save time and strength by doing to-day? "Just this time," she says to herself, "I will use the sewing machine in this hard running condition. To-morrow I will give it a regular overhauling." As a consequence her thread breaks, her back aches, she grows nervous and irritable, and the work is poorly done.

Why does she not take a lesson from the reaper her husband runs or the locomotive her son drives past the farm on the new branch road? The oil can always is ready there, so is the waste to wipe away the superfluous drops of lubricant; there are no wound up ravelings or dust collections in that smoothly running machine. "Yes, but I haven't time," the woman will say, "to take such great care of my sewing machine"—not realizing that it does not take time but rather saves time to have good tools and to keep them in good condition.

And by tools it is not meant hammer, saw, axe, or awl, though when a woman must use these she would greatly decrease the difficulty of the unaccustomed work by making sure that they, too, were quite fit. These are, however, a man's tools, and woman has her own particular implements. If she would look to it that they are kept in proper condition for the work to be done with them the "drudgery" of housekeeping would be lessened.

Do, for instance, have plenty of dishcloths and keep them clean; do not try to get along with one, hanging it in a dark corner when not in use. Wash them, boil them, sun them in summer, and freeze them in winter; for if there is one place more than another where microbes "delight to dwell" it is surely in a stale dishcloth. Have a steel link dishcloth for pot and pan and kettle, and save your silver spoons and your finger nails. Have a mop dishcloth to use in hot water, and regard the appearance of your hands as something not beneath a woman's care. Have at least three pans when you wash dishes, for washing, rinsing, and draining; better two for draining, so that fine china and glass need not be put in with large and heavy dishes.

To do things in the right way is no more trouble and secures far better results than to do them in the wrong way. The right way to fill and trim a lamp, for instance, is to spread a newspaper on the table under your lamp. Then sit down, so that you can look across the wick, and trim it either with the fingers by pinching off the ash or with sharp scissors—never with an old, dull pair.

ton of a roasted turkey and chop all together fine and mix with one or two well-beaten eggs, according to quantity, and make in loaf and bake and baste for fifteen or twenty minutes.

Cranberry Pie.—One-half cupful of seeded raisins, one cupful of cranberries (cut in half), one cupful of sugar mixed with one tablespoon of flour, one-half cupful of hot water, one teaspoonful of vanilla. Bake in crust like apple pie.

Hash.—One cupful of mashmallows, cut fine; one cupful of blanched almonds, chopped fine; one cupful of cherries or pineapple, one pint of whipped cream. The cherries and pineapple may be put together, which makes it delicious.

Nut Bread.—Mix together one-half teaspoonful of salt, four cupfuls of flour, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of chopped walnuts, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonfuls of salt. Add two cupfuls of sweet milk, one beaten egg. Let raise twenty minutes and bake in moderate oven one hour.

CLEANING.

To Clean Wire Lme.—Sprinkle a woolen cloth with coal oil and rub the line with this. Then sprinkle the cloth with a good cleaning powder and go over it again. The line will be perfectly clean, not leaving a mark on the clothes.

To Clean Lace.—When lace is soiled, even the finest, such as honiton and point, you can clean it by being careful in this way: Sew the lace upon strips of muslin and roll tightly around a smooth glass bottle and fasten securely. Make a suds of some good wasling powder and put the bottle in this to soak for several hours. If the water looks soiled make fresh suds and repeat the process, patting the lace frequently between the fingers and rinse in several waters; then dry the lace on the bottle with a soft towel.

Lace Curtains.—It often happens that lace curtains are torn by stretching on a frame or pinning to a sheet on the floor. To avoid this danger try this plan. Cover a bolster roll longer than the curtains are made with strong white cloth. Pin the curtain by its lower edge in a perfectly straight line along the roll. Attach the edges by their scallops, noting the number on each side and keeping the correct proportions. After the first time around this will not be difficult. Allow the curtain to dry thoroughly. Remove the pins. Lay the curtain flat and roll in the opposite direction leaving it on the bolster about an hour. It will then hang perfectly straight.

HOUSECLEANING.

Painted Walls.—Try washing your smoky painted wall with milk, either sweet or sour. Use a soft cloth.

Painted Walls.—Set a kettle of water on the fire and let it boil until it creates a moisture all over the walls, then dip a sponge or soft cloth into a pail of hot suds containing a tablespoonful of ammonia and wash in the usual manner, beginning at the top and work downward. This method leaves no streaks.

Gilt Frames.—Take sufficient flour or sulphur to give a golden tinge to about one and one-half pints of water, and in this boil four

HOW TO AVOID STRIKES

SWISS CO. GIVES EMPLOYEES FAIR SHAKE.

The Greatest Embroidery Manufacturing Establishment in the World.

I: St. Gall, Switzerland, where most of our imported embroidery comes from, they don't know what a strike is, although factory workers comprise the major part of the population.

The contentment of the working people is due to the excellent condition under which they live. The employers do everything possible to make the lives of the operatives as pleasant as possible, and the result is mutually advantageous.

GOOD AWAY FROM HOME.

One large American firm, engaged extensively in the manufacture of embroideries, has been particularly successful in creating this feeling of contentment among its employees, and as its methods are typical of those employed by other Swiss manufacturers, a description of their plan will suffice to explain the working of the system prevailing through the country.

The plan adopted gives the factory operatives not only comfortable homes at the minimum cost, but an opportunity of enjoying outdoor life and of indulging in the natural and healthful occupation of cultivating the soil.

FACTORIES IN COUNTRY.

The embroidery industry of St. Gall presents peculiar advantages for carrying out comprehensive plans for ameliorating the condition of the working classes. The factories are scattered throughout the surrounding country, while in the city are only located the counting houses and the warehouses where orders are received, the raw materials prepared, and the finished products sent out. This arrangement also has the advantage of saving St. Gall from the grime and smoke usually such unpleasant features of manufacturing towns. As an indication of the extent of manufacturing, it may be mentioned that the city's annual trade in the embroidery line amounts to more than $29,000,000, about one-eighth of the total trade of Switzerland.

CHEAP HOUSES.

At the Klausen factories, at Weinfelden, about eighteen miles from St. Gall, a number of modern dwelling houses were erected in 1903. These houses, well and tastefully built, each with six rooms, concreted cellar, and modern conveniences, cost the firm $1,737 each. The tenants, who are all heads of families, pay but 300 francs $57.90 per annum rent, in equal monthly payments of 25 francs (about $4.83), which amount represents a trifle over 3 per cent. on the investment, not taking into account the cost of keeping the property in good repair.

These houses, built along a broad, well-paved avenue, have front-side and rear gardens. Ample play-ground are provided for children and there are plenty of shade and fruit trees. Tenants seldom leave. In fact, so well satisfied are they with their surroundings, that

On the Farm

PROPER FERTILIZERS.

Many farmers have a prejudice against the use of commercial fertilizers, thinking their use is an acknowledgment of poor farming. It is hard to understand why this should be the case, for the application of commercial fertilizers restores the balance by adding the plant food which has been taken out of the soil. When bone meal is applied it is only returning to the soil what has been sold off in the bone of the animals produced on the farm. When acid phosphate or nitrate of soda is used it is taken from the inexhaustible store which nature has deposited in the south, putting it where it is needed for the growth of plants. The same is true of the potash mines in Germany, where there is a great supply of soluble potash ready to be used as soon as that in the soil and such native sources as wood ashes are exhausted.

Many farmers fail in the use of commercial fertilizers because they do not realize that nature stores up in the virgin soil large quantities of humus which has been steadily depleted by each crop. The use of barnyard manure will increase the amount of humus. One of the chief advantages of commercial fertilizer is that it has no humus, thus lessening its bulk and enabling it to be shipped long distances, which could not be profitably done if it contained bulky humus, as stable manure does. In order to use commercial fertilizer successfully, care must be taken to keep the humus content of the soil up to the same standard as is found in new land. This can only be done by plowing in vegetable matter. Where clover comes in rotation every third year there will be no trouble in keeping humus up to the necessary standard, and in addition the supply of nitrogen will be greatly increased.

Where a farmer is growing early maturing crops, as truck gardeners do, large amounts of soluble nitrogen are required in connection with potash and phosphoric acid, but the man who is interested in general, mixed farming or dairying, and who uses an up-to-date rotation, sowing clover every third or fourth year, will have little need for nitrogenous fertilizers. The clover sod and manure will supply the nitrogen and humus, but he will need liberal applications of potash and phosphoric acid. These materials are supplied most readily in a commercial form by acid phosphate and muriate of potash.

A good application is 300 to 500 pounds an acre of a mixture composed of one ton of muriate of potash to three tons of acid phosphate, or the same amount of a ready-mixed fertilizer, known as "10-8," which contains 10 per cent. phosphoric acid and 8 per cent. potash. An application of this kind of fertilizer will stiffen the straw, give a plump, hard berry and a greater weight per bush, as well as increase the yield to the acre. It will also assure a catch of clover, and when a good clover-crop is obtained a to spread a newspaper on the table under your lamp. Then sit down, so that you can look across the wick, and trim it either with the fingers by pinching off the ash or with sharp scissors—never with an old, dull pair.

Take some interest in your work to do it well, economically, skillfully, expeditiously, and achieve good results. Cherish the feeling that the wise care of the home is a duty, a pleasure, a profitable employment, and that a house so cared for is a haven for all the family and all the family's friends.

POTATO YEAST AND BREAD.

Rub through a sieve three good sized potatoes. Add one cake of yeast, soaked; one tablespoonful of salt, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, and a pint of the warm potato water. Let stand in a moderate temperature until sour or bubbly, which will be in three or four days. It will seethe and sizzle when ripe.

The day before you bake repeat the process above described, except the setting away to sour. Mix the fresh yeast with that first made. Add water for sufficient quantity of bread and one pint more. Add no flour at this time. Let set overnight in moderately warm place. In the morning it will be bubbly, if ripe, and settlings in the bottom. Stir it up and take out a pint for the next baking, putting it away tightly covered in a glass jar. To the remainder add flour to make a thick sponge and let rise for half an hour. When risen mix stiff. Work down once, then work out in pan. You can have your bread out of the oven by 11 o'clock.

For the next baking begin at the second mixing of yeast, adding it to the contents of the jar, and taking from the new mixture enough for the next baking and so on. It can be kept going thus for years, particularly if bread is baked twice a week. However, it is well to add one-quarter of a cake of fresh yeast to the bottled portion every three months. The recipe sounds complicated, but it is simple after the first start and the bread never fails.

Potato yeast and bread therefrom No. 2—Pare and cut up six medium sized potatoes and boil in three pints of water until tender. Add one tablespoonful of salt to one pint of flour in a two gallon jar. Scald this flour with the potato water and add the potatoes, mashed. Thin down at once with cold water until it is of the consistency of cream and smooth. Add two well soaked yeast cakes and let raise in a warm place for twenty-four hours, or until it has settled back, but do not stir. Cover and set in the refrigerator, ready for use.

On the morning of your baking day make a hole in the center of flour in your bread raiser, and add one tablespoonful each of salt, sugar, and lard. Add one pint of potato yeast and two pints warm water and mix stiff. Knead well at once, set to raise in warm place, and make into loaves when light, using melted lard on bread board instead of flour. Let raise and bake. This is excellent and much shorter than the old way.

ATTRACTIVE RECIPES.

Minced Turkey Loaf.—Take white and dark meat and dressing, not the hard skin, from the skeleginn at the top and work down-ward. This method leaves no streaks.

Gilt Frames.—Take sufficient flour or sulphur to give a golden tinge to about one and one-half pints of water, and in this boil four or five bruised onions. Strain off the liquid, and when cold wash with a soft brush any gilding which requires restoring.

Floor Stain.—An inexpensive floor stain: One ounce of permanganate of potash dissolved in quart of warm water. Wood painted with it when dry will be a deep brown color and with one coat of varnish will look well. Must not allow it to touch the hands; it will stain the skin.

Putting Away Woolens.—When putting furs and woolens away for the summer brush thoroughly, and air them, and sprinkle liberally with ordinary black pepper to preserve from moths. We have used this in rugs, feathers, furs, and woolens for twenty years with excellent success, as did our mothers before us. There is no disagreeable odor, and the pepper is always at hand.

Save Stockings.—As housecleaning time is at hand, most people find a large supply of old stockings. Don't throw them away, as they make splendid rugs. Cut stocking round and round in a strip about one-half inch wide in medium weight hose, wider in real thin, and not so wide in coarser ones. Use black for center of rug and stripe the ends with whatever color you have in colored stockings. Use fringe to match colored striped ends. A small rug can be made in one afternoon, as there isn't much of any sewing to be done, as one stocking makes yards of rags without any sewing. One and one-half pounds of rags to one square yard of carpet is what is used. They are easily washed and won't fade any more. Use cotton or woolen stockings.

Furniture Polish.—Equal parts of linseed oil, turpentine, vinegar, and spirits of wine. Mode: When used, shake the mixture well and rub on the furniture with a linen rag and polish with a clean one.

Insects.—Dissolve one pound of alum in two quarts of water. Let it remain over night, until all the alum is dissolved. Then, with a brush, apply boiling hot to every joint or crevice in the closet or shelves where Croton bugs, ants, cockroaches, etc., intrude.

ONE FAULT.

A drill-sergeant, whose severity had made him unpopular with his company, was putting a squad of recruits through the funeral exercise.

Opening the ranks so as to admit the passage of a cortege between them, the instructor, by way of practical explanation, walked slowly down the lane formed by the two ranks, saying as he did so:

"Now, I am the dead body. Pay attention!"

Having reached the end of the lane, he turned round, regarded the recruits with a scrutinizing eye, and then remarked:

"Your 'ands is right, and your 'eads is right, but you 'aven't got that look of regret you ought to 'ave!"

When a man has a cause in his heart it will get to his muscles.

well-paved avenue, have front, side and rear gardens. Ample play-ground are provided for children and there are plenty of shade and fruit trees. Tenants seldom leave. In fact, so well satisfied are they with their surroundings, that even offers of higher wages elsewhere fail to tempt them to take other employment. It was a pleasure to visit these homes and to observe their cleanliness, their neatness, and the atmosphere of contentment that pervades.

PLACE FOR GIRLS.

At the same factories a large and handsome building, erected four years ago, accommodates over 100 female operative all Italians. Throughout the greater part of Switzerland Italian labor is in demand, especially in the embroidery factories, where large numbers of women are employed. The Klaubner community house, arranged something on the plan of young ladies' seminaries in the United States, is admirably managed by the members of a religious community. The dormitories, large, well lighted and ventilated, are neatly and tastefully furnished, with numerous bathrooms connecting.

There is an assembly room for dancing and innocent games, furnished with a piano and an organ. There are likewise ample grounds for outdoor games and recreation. An extensive garden and orchard furnished all the vegetables and fruits consumed in the house. The reception room, the storeroom, the pantry, wash room and kitchen are almost equal to those of the modern hotel.

IT DOESN'T SEEM TOO MUCH.

The boarders pay to the firm for the excellent accommodations offered them only 10 centimes (2 cents) per day each, the running expenses being divided equally among them all. The amount paid by each of them for board averages about 75 centimes (14½ cents) per day, making the total amount per day paid by each boarder, only 85 centimes (or 16½ cents), or about $4.93 per month. These women make an average daily wage of 3 francs (58 cents), or 90 francs ($17.37) per month, so that they are enabled to save a considerable amount.

GIRLS CONTENTED.

Of course the firm also employs a great number of Swiss girls and women who live at home with their parents or in boarding houses in the locality.

Since the establishment of this community home the Klaubner firm has experienced no difficulty with its Italian women employees, who seem to be well satisfied and contented with their lot.

DELIGHTFUL THOUGHT.

He had just eaten her home-made bread for the first time and was pensive.

"Darling," asked the bride, with a joyous smile, "of what were you thinking?"

He swallowed the piece of paving-stone with some exertion, took a few minutes to recover the use of his talking machine and still the sound of his beating heart, and then said slowly:

"I was thinking of Samoa."

"It must be a beautiful place," she said. "But why Samoa?"

His eyes sought the granite block.

An application of this kind of fertilizer will stiffen the straw, give a plump, hard berry and a greater weight per bush, as well as increase the yield to the acre. It will also assure a catch of clover, and when a good clover crop is obtained a profitable yield of grain is sure to follow.

In deciding upon the quantity or character of the fertilizer to be used, the farmer should not follow any given formula blindly, but carefully experiment on his own farm until he has decided just what combination of fertilizer will yield him the greatest profit.

LAZIEST MAN ON EARTH.

Stays Six Weeks in Bed and Does Not Remove Clothes.

Described as the "laziest man on earth," Archibald Depau, residing at Seven Sisters road, Tottenham, London, England, appeared before the Tottenham Bench to answer a summons at the instance of his wife, who applied for a separation order because he had neglected to provide for her and her children.

Depau, it was stated, was last year twice sentenced to terms of imprisonment for six months each for neglecting the children. He came out of prison six weeks ago, and went straight to bed, and until the beginning of the week he had for the most part remained in bed.

Mr. Windsor, for Mrs. Depau, said the parties were married in 1883. The defendant was formerly a licensed victualler, but since 1894 he had done nothing. His wife had thrown him out of bed, and even shut him out of doors to keep him away from his bed, but he got back through the window. He said that he wanted a new set of teeth and his hair dyed before he could get work. Situations had been offered him, but he refused to leave the bed.

Mrs. Depau stated that her husband had stayed in bed for as long as six weeks. She had lifted him out with the bedding to get him to move, but he simply stared at her. He did not even trouble to take his clothes off. She added that his brother, now dead, was like him.

A Salvation Army officer told the Court that the defendant had been in one of their institutions, and they had got him to do some work, but had been unable to get a smile out of him. Witness suggested that if he remained in the institution it might have some good effect upon him.

The magistrate granted the wife a separation order, with custody of the children, but would not at that stage make any order for maintenance.

The defendant, who bore a sleepy expression, listened with apparent indifference to some words of advice from the chairman, and then left the court.

STUDENT OF HUMAN NATURE.

"That sinner said he wanted the picture to look exactly like him," said the assistant.

"H'm!" replied the photographer. "A man who is that well satisfied with his appearance must be pretty vain. Touch the plate up very carefully."

The possibility of really entering into another's grief is a joy that angels must envy us.

"Good! I take you at your word."

"It is I who take you at your word, and to prove that I do not fear the company with which you are trying to frighten me, I will declare that I should be delighted to have you invite this evening your thief and her young associate."

"Come, I give you back my esteem, and if I knew where to find the persons you speak of I would beg them to join us. Unfortunately they are fled I know not where. The woman, perhaps, has fallen into the claws of the Russian police, who have most likely sent her to Siberia. The lover must have crossed the seas, if he has not blown his brains out. We need think no more of them and will sup without them."

"At what hour?" asked Mouriatine.

"After the theatre—is it not, colonel?"

"Certainly," said Borisoff, bowing.

"You will think me very indiscreet," said Mouriatine, "but I have just asked a very insidious question. You must know I am nearly famished. I arrived this evening at five, and had only time to make my toilette and look for my friend Borisoff at his club. We found so much to talk about that we forgot our dinner."

"To come to the opera? What a lover of music you are!"

"I had telegraphed from St. Petersburg to reserve two seats,—the fancy of one at a distance who wishes to enjoy a thorough Parisian life without losing a minute. I counted on the company of my faithful Borisoff, but did not calculate on the train being two hours late."

"Good! I understand, and it would be a poor reward for your frankness to compel you to suffer the tortures of hunger till midnight. We will leave whenever it pleases you, messieurs."

"What! you would sacrifice to our appetites the remainder of this play?"

"Willingly. The act is about to conclude. We will leave before the third."

"You are as good as you are beautiful. But it will not be for your house, I suppose? You will not be expected so early as this?"

"My servants expect me always. I have sent away my coupe, it is true."

"And I have not given orders to my coachman," said Borisoff.

No matter. A hack will take us to Rue Jouffroy in twenty minutes, and in ten other minutes, my famished messieurs, you will sit down to table."

"Adopted unanimously," cried Mouriatine, gaily.

The colonel thought no more of opposition. He approved of the "Often enough to recognize him if he were here."

"Do you suppose it possible that he could be at the Opera in company with the widows in that box?"

"I should see nothing surprising in it. He has, I believe, no fortune, and seeks, no doubt, an advantageous marriage."

"He! marry one of those vulgar upstarts! I could not believe him capable of such a thing. Besides, I was insane to imagine he would appear at the opera in an uncovered box."

"Why?" asked the colonel, assuming an astonished air.

"Because he cannot be in Paris."

"One would infer from your words," said Mouriatine, "that the gentleman in question was forced to hide himself. Has he been guilty of any crime?"

"Madame," resumed Borisoff, who began to get a clear view of the situation, "I can certify that you are mistaken. M. de Carnoel has not left Paris as far as I know."

"He may have done so without your knowledge."

"Then he must have left this morning, for I saw him yesterday."

"It acknowledging that he held intercourse with M. de Carnoel, the colonel was burning the bridge behind him, but it had become apparent that Madame de Garches knew a great deal about the prisoner, and the best means of extracting what she knew appeared to be to assume the attitude of a friend of the young man who interested her."

"You have spoken to him!" she exclaimed.

"Yes; I met him on the street this morning."

"And he did not try to avoid you?"

"Not at all. We have not been intimate, but have held the most courteous relations. Why should he have avoided me?"

"I thought he must have reasons for not wishing to meet with former acquaintances, and am delighted to learn that I was mistaken. Did he speak to you of his present circumstances?"

"Yes; but with considerable reserve. He told me, however, that he had abandoned a situation he had held and proposed to embark for America. I offered him a recommendation to our consul-general at New York."

"And he accepted?"

"With gratitude. That reminds me that I have not sent him my promised letter. I shall repair my negligence to-morrow."

"It is very singular," said Madame de Garches, still directing her glass to the box occupied by the matrimonially-inclined widows. Then suddenly laying it down, she said aloud: "I was sure of it. The young man has just risen, and his full face does not resemble M. de Carnoel in the least."

"He is very fortunate, this M. de sooner I may go in quest of M. de Carnoel."

"Perfect. I shall be ready on your return."

The two Russians hastened from the box and reclaimed their overcoats, without having perceived Maxime, who was promenading at the end of the corridor.

"Hey!" said Mouriatine in his companion's ear, "was I right in advising you to approach this lady? I caught your idea of confronting the Carnoel with this jade. It is bold, but a masterly stroke."

"A stroke in which I might be the loser, did I not take precautions. I must first see the house, how it is guarded, and what servants she has under her orders. If I scent a trap, I shall make a feint of going in search of Carnoel, and shall return saying I have not found him. The affair will be ended for to-night, but I shall resume it after another method. If, on the contrary, I find that force could be employed with any chance of success, I shall bring Carnoel in a carriage with an escort of three good blades. I shall drive myself and will conduct him to the mistress of the house. That will be the psychological moment, as M. Bismarck says. With a glance we may detect whether there has been any complicity between them. My three old soldiers will enter with me; three others will guard the door and the street. We will search the house from top to bottom, and I hope will make many discoveries."

"Your casnet very likely," said Mouriatine, "and as to this pretended Madame de Garches—"

"We will bring her to my house with the Carnoel, the femme de chambre, the cook, and the men servants, if there are any. We will empty the house in a few trips, and will then see what is to be done with our prisoners."

"It is spirited, but if well conducted it must succeed, and in that case the great chief will approve it."

"It will succeed. I shall not act without being sure of my ground."

"Oh, I feel confident of it! Chance has been on our side; let us make the most of it."

"Come, let us look for a hack," said the colonel, pushing Mouriatine toward the great stairway.

CONCRETE CHIMNEYS.

In advocating the plan of building factory chimneys of reinforced concrete, Mr. E. R. Matthews told the Concrete Institute in London recently some interesting facts about these structures. They can be built at less than half the cost of brick chimneys, and are of greater stability than brick structures, because they have no joints. Very much less material is required on account of the relative thinness of the walls. Under the British law a chimney 300 feet tall would have to have the walls, if constructed of brick, about four feet ten inches thick at the base, but a concrete chimney would have a thickness of only nine inches for the outer wall, and five inches for the inner, with a space of four inches between. The "hair cracks" in concrete chimneys are only skin-deep, and have no practical importance. The chimneys are anchored by having the vertical steel bars continued into the foundation, and there bent at an angle of 50 degrees. Many are calculated to resist a wind of 100 miles per hour, a velocity practically unknown.

Do not let a cold settle in your lungs. Resort to Bickel's Anti-Consumptive Syrup at the first intimation of irritation in the throat and prevent disease from lodging in the pulmonary organs. Neglected colds are the cause of untold suffering throughout the country, all of which could have been prevented by the application of this simple but powerful medicine. The price, 25 cents, brings it within the reach of all.

To Rue Jouffroy in twenty minutes, and in ten other minutes, my furnished messieurs, you will sit down to table."

"Adopted unanimously," cried Mouriatine, gaily.

The colonel thought no more of opposition. He approved of the fabric of the neglected dinner, for his opinion now was that it was expedient to penetrate at the earliest possible moment the house of this woman who deserved to be studied more closely.

She turned toward the stage and appeared to be absorbed in the last acts of the act that was concluding.

Suddenly, however, she took up her opera-glass and directed it toward one of the boxes on the same side. Two women occupied the front of this box, in the back of which was a gentleman who was scarcely visible.

"Strange!" cried Madame de Garches. "I could swear it was he."

"Ah!" said Mouriatine, jocosely. "Is your general of last winter here?"

"I am not thinking about that personage, but I fancied I recognized a young man whom I little expected to see here."

"The friend of your Nihilist, perhaps?" said Mouriatine, still in a bantering tone. "Nothing can be seen of him but the end of his nose; and as for the two women, I can only say they are neither young nor pretty."

"They are bourgeoises," said Borisoff. "very rich and very common, who have taken a box for the winter in the hope of being seen and espoused by some ruined princes."

"The resemblance is strange," continued the brunette to herself, "but if it were he it would be stranger still."

"Surely, madame, this youth may flatter himself with having inspired an interest on your part. If he knew you were at so much pains to identify him, no doubt he would hasten to show himself."

"I doubt it very much," murmured Madame de Garches.

"You think then he has a reason for concealing himself?"

"My dear sir, you are too curious."

"I confess it and am silent."

"You would do better to wait until he leans on the front of the box, and then tell me if you have ever seen him."

"Me! I come to Paris too rarely to know the habitudes of the Opera."

"It would in truth be better to ask the colonel if he has ever met with the young man whom I fancied I saw in that box. His name is M. de Carnoel."

At this name spoken by the charming mouth of Madame de Garches, the colonel involuntarily started. Anything might sooner have been expected than inquiries from her concerning M. de Carnoel.

Nevertheless he must answer without evasion, must reply by yes or no. His professional instinct suggested the thought that it were better not to cut short all possibility of further investigation by a negative reply.

"Is not M. de Carnoel the son of a former attache of the embassy?" he asked.

"Yes, I think his father was formerly engaged in diplomacy. Then you have met with the young man?"

"I am looking at the box occupied by the matrimonially-inclined widows. Then suddenly laying it down, she said aloud: 'I was sure of it. The young man has just risen, and his full face does not resemble M. de Carnoel in the least.'"

"He is very fortunate, this M. de Carnoel," laughed Mouriatine; "he absorbs all your thoughts. Might we know when and where he made your conquest?"

"Dear monsieur," said the brunette, with eyes of fire, dryly, "your question is an impertinence. No one has made my conquest. If I am interested about this young man it is because one of my best friends, who is residing in Florence, has charged me to find out what has become of him, and to deliver a box—"

"Containing love tokens?"

"I know nothing about that, but I know that you are insupportable, and I beg you not to interrupt my conversation with the colonel."

"Madame," said Borisoff, "I will with pleasure undertake to forward the box to M. de Carnoel."

"He has given you his address?"

"It was necessary he should do so that I might send him the letter, and if you would like at the same time to have my valet deliver the box—"

"Thank you; I promised to place it in his hands myself. I confess it embarrassing me a little, for I can scarcely go to him; but I can write, and suppose he will not refuse to come to see me at my house."

"Assuredly not, but it would be well not to delay too long, for he may leave Paris at any moment."

"True; he must be in haste to depart," murmured Madame de Garches to herself. "What is to be done, then?"

"Is it really important that you should see M. de Carnoel?" said Borisoff, after a short silence.

"Undoubtedly."

"Will you receive him this evening?"

"Why not? Our interview would not be long and need not interrupt our supper."

"Well, I can pass by his lodging. If I find him there, as is quite likely, I will bring him to you; if not, I will leave my card, with a word to signify that I am awaiting him in Rue Jouffroy. He will suppose it to be on account of the letter and will certainly come."

"My dear colonel, if you would do that you would be the most amiable of men."

"There is a compliment which I hasten to deserve. Permit me to leave you for an instant. We must make sure of a carriage. The sooner we arrive at your house, the Disease for several years past, and has been doing everything in his power to find a cure for it. He has found the cure. It is Dodd's Kidney Pills. "Yes, I tried all kinds of medicines for my kidney trouble," the postmaster joyfully states. "None of them seemed to do me any good till I commenced to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Two boxes of them cured me completely. I highly recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all sufferers from Kidney Disease. I would not be without them."

Dodd's Kidney Pills cure all diseases of the kidneys, from Backache to Bright's Disease. They also cure all diseases caused by disordered kidneys failing to strain the impurities out of the blood. That's why they cure Dropsy, Rheumatism, and Heart Disease. If you haven't tried them yourself ask your neighbors about them.

HONEYMOON IN BALLOON.

French Aeronaut and His Bride Took It Recently.

A curious honeymoon trip was made by the aeronaut M. Emery Tierlynck and his bride, Mlle. Angèle Quessaist, daughter of a manufacturer of Roubaix, France. After the wedding ceremony was over they left Roubaix in a balloon for a short aerial journey. It was the 120th ascent of the aeronaut, who had just returned from Morocco, where he did his military service as military aeronaut at Casa Blanca. As for the bride, she had never been in a balloon before. After leaving the church the wedding party proceeded to the Velodrome, where the balloon Neptune was in waiting. The balloon and the car were gaily decorated with flowers and flags. The young couple entered the car, and the balloon was sent off amidst the cheers of a large crowd of people who had gathered round. Two hours after it came down at a little country place near Arras, in the Pas de Calais department, about thirty miles from the start, and then the young couple received an ovation from the peasants. M. and Mme Tierlynck returned in a motor-car to Roubaix in the evening for the wedding banquet. The bride declared herself delighted with the aerial honeymoon trip.

HOW HE EXPRESSED IT.

Every small boy—the right kind, anyhow—thinks his own mother the symbol of all perfection. Few, however, have the ability to express their admiration as prettily as the little hero of the following anecdote:

Richard's mother was putting him to bed, and as she kissed him good night, she said, "Do you know you are the whole world to mama?" "Am I?" he answered, quickly. "Well, then, you're heaven and the north pole to me!"

What You Need in Spring is a Blood Building Tonic

A spring medicine is an actually necessity to most people. Nature demands it as an aid in carrying off the impurities that have accumulated in the blood during the indoor life of winter. But unfortunately thousands of people who do recognize the necessity of a spring medicine do not know what is best to take and dose themselves with harsh, gripping purgatives.

This is a serious mistake. Ask any doctor and he will tell you that the use of purgative medicine weakens the system but does not cure disease. In the spring the system needs building up—purgatives cannot do this—they weaken you still more. The blood should be made rich, red, and pure, and only a tonic medicine can do this. The best blood building, nerve restoring tonic medical science has yet discovered is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine actually makes new, rich blood. This new blood strengthens every organ, every nerve and every part of the body. This is why Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure headaches and backaches, rheumatism and neuralgia, banish pimples and eruptions, and give a glow of health to the most sallow skin. Men, women and growing boys and girls who take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills eat well, sleep well, and feel bright, active and strong. If you need a medicine this spring—and most likely you do—try this great reviving tonic, and see the new life, new health and new strength it will put into you.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

VIRGIL AND ETNA.

Roman Poet Gives Graphic Account of Volcanic Eruption.

Etna, which still holds the Sicilians terror-stricken, has certainly been alarming, and often overwhelming, the inhabitants of Sicily at various times during a period of over 2,000 years. There is a reference in the writings of Diodorus Siculus to an eruption which is said to have occurred as far back as 1693 B. C. Virgil, in the "Aeneid," has a graphic account of Etna in eruption, upon which the modern journalist would find it hard to improve. "Etna thunders with horrible ruins," writes the Roman poet, "and sometimes sends forth to the skies a black cloud, ascending in a pitchy whirlwind of smoke and glowing embers, throws up globes of flame, and kisses the stars; sometimes belching flings on high the ribs and shattered bowels of the mountain, and with a rumbling noise in wreathy heaps convolves in air molten rocks, and boils up from the lowest bottom. It is said that the body of Enceladus, half consumed with lightning, is pressed down with this pile, and that cumbrous Etna, laid above him, is therefore still spouting forth flames from its burst furnaces; and that as often as he shifts his weary side, the volcano with a doom-groan

ANOTHER GORDON.

A Young Englishman is Command- er-in-Chief in Morocco.

Kaid Belton, the intrepid young Englishman who placed Mulai Hafid on the throne of Morocco, is now in London, writing a book of his experiences.

Kaid Belton has been nick-named "The King-Maker," and, as a soldier of fortune his achievements are almost worthy to be ranked with those of General Gordon, Valentine Baker, Hobart Pasha, Colonel Sherrington, and other distinguished British adventurers.

When only nineteen years old, Kaid Belton, then a trooper in the yeomanry, received a commission in the regulars for distinguished gallantry on the field, and he received his captaincy some time later, under similar circumstances, in the Somaliland campaign.

In April, 1908, being then at home on leave, he resigned his commission, went to Morocco and, after many adventures, offered his services to Mulai Hafid, the "Pretender," and in a few months he was appointed "Kaid," or Commander-in-Chief.

With an army of 20,000 men, which he had got together and trained, he overthrew Abdel-Aziz, and shortly afterwards Mulai Hafid was proclaimed Sultan of Morocco.

Since then Kaid Belton has undertaken several other campaigns against the French and the turbulent native tribes. He is still on the sunny side of thirty.

SWAN DROWNED A BOY.

Cecil Barratt, a five-year-old Nottingham, England, boy, was stated, at an inquest, to have been pulled into the river by a swan, who attacked him so savagely that he was drowned. The boy was the son of the caretaker of the Nottingham Britannia Rowing Club, and was playing on the landing-stage, when the swan attacked him. The lad's father dived several times, but failed to find the boy, and was also attacked by the bird before he could reach the landing-stage.

A HINT TO YOUNG MOTHERS.

Don't walk up and down the floor with a cross, restless child. Nothing can be more demoralizing to the little one and it is a serious tax upon the mother's strength and nerves. When a child is peevish and cross there is probably some little derangement of the stomach or bowels, and a dose of Baby's Own Tablets will remove the cause of the trouble and enable the little one to sleep soundly. Mrs. W. Bouffard, Piopolis, Que., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets superior to all other remedies for curing constipation and making teething easy. They also promote healthful sleep, and I recommend them to other mothers." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

A SCHEME.

"O! Willie!" exclaimed little Elsie, "what did you open that oven door for? Don't you know that with spoil the cake mamma's baking!"

"Sure," replied Willie, "an' if it's spoiled she'd let us eat all we want of it."

FELT AT HOME.

A gentleman took a friend to an opera. The music, grand as it was, sounded a little noisy, more especially when the bang of drums and the crash of the cymbals occurred at intervals. But the friend's face remained unmoved.

Gentleman—"Doesn't this glorious volume of sound affect you?"

"Oh, not in the least," was the calm reply. "You forget I am a boilermaker."

I consider MINARD'S LINIMENT the BEST Liniment in use. I got my foot badly jammed lately. I bathed it well with MINARD'S LINIMENT and it was as well as ever next day.
